LA GUARDIA TRIUMPHS

COMPLETE CONQUEST IN NEW YORK

TAMMANY TAKES DEFEAT WELL

New York, Nov. 8. The final figures of the Mayoral election in New York showed that over two million voters went to the poll despite the intimidation campaign.

La Guardia had a majority over 250,000 the figures being:

La Guardia 858,500
McKee 604,000
O'Brien 536,000

Mr. La Guardia followed up his triumph over Tammany Hall, the first disturbance of its rule of New York for many years, with a promise to give the people a civic administration free from graft, from sinecures and from wastefulness.

ALL-ROUND VICTORY.

The Democrats also failed in another of their cherished objects, namely, control of the New York State Assembly, in which they lost ten seats of New York City's representation.

Mr. Bernard Deutch, the well-known Jewish leader, and a follower of Mr. La Guardia, was elected President of the City Board of Aldermen, while the remarkable revolt against Tammany also resulted in a majority for La Guardia's borough and judicial candidates.

All of them were elected with the exception of Mr. Pecora, the attorney who has charge of the Senate Banking Investigation, who was third in a three-cornered fight for the post of District Attorney for New York City.

GOOD LOSER.

Mr. O'Brien, the retiring Mayor, proved a good loser. He emphasised that it had been a clean fight and that Tammany Hall had taken its first defeat good-naturedly despite the fact that it stands to lose thousands of municipal jobs.

"The Tammany Tiger, like all cats has many lives. Tammany will continue all the same," declared a prominent Tammany official today.—Reuter.

HIGHEST LEVEL SINCE 1914

DOLLAR RATE SOARS IN LONDON

London, Nov. 8. In London to-day the Foreign Exchange Market dollar rate rose to 4.90, which is its highest level since August, 1914.

Later the rate eased to 4.92 1/2.—British Wireless.

DRAMATIC LONDON ANNOUNCEMENT

TRAGIC AFFAIR APPARENTLY BEING KEPT SECRET FROM PEOPLE

YOUNG SON PROCLAIMED NEW KING

LONDON, NOV. 8. NADIR SHAH, THE KING OF AFGHANISTAN, WAS ASSASSINATED IN KABUL THIS MORNING.

A sensational dramatic communique was issued to this effect by the Afghan Minister in London this evening, the news coming as a bombshell to the newspapers and diplomatic circles alike.

Not a word has come through from the many newspaper correspondents in Kabul and it is supposed that the news of the murder is temporarily being withheld from the public.

The information at the Afghan Legation is extremely scanty.

The cable received by the Minister merely states that Nadir Khan was murdered this morning and his son proclaimed King to-night.

A BRILLIANT MILITARY MAN

The manner of the assassination is not disclosed. The telegram mentions little more than that the King was murdered by "a traitor."

The country is quiet.

KING FOR FOUR YEARS.

Although Nadir Khan, had to win for himself the throne of Afghanistan in 1929, he was a member of the Royal House.

Under King Amanullah he was Minister for War and commander-in-chief during the campaign which was started against India in 1919 and he conducted the negotiations with the Government of India regarding the granting of an amnesty to the Afghans domiciled in India who had taken part in the fight.

His success on that occasion brought him great prestige among all the tribes and he enjoyed the confidence of the mullahs.

In 1924 as the result of a difference of opinion between him and Amanullah regarding the handling of a local rising, Nadir resigned his offices and went as Minister to Paris, but in 1926 gave up the post owing to ill-health and settled at Nice.

MUCH ABILITY.

A man of much ability, he was always in favour of introducing modern European ways into Afghanistan, but he was opposed to the haste with which Amanullah, after his European tour in 1925, attempted to force his reforms on the country.

When in the winter of 1928-9 a revolt broke out on account of the drastic changes and Bacha-I-Sakao defeated Amanullah, the latter called to his aid Nadir, who arrived too late, however, to prevent the fall of the King.

Nadir put himself at the head of the loyal troops and on behalf of Amanullah fought against the usurper, who called himself Habibullah. But, when Amanullah renounced the throne and went to India, from which he later proceeded to Italy, Nadir was himself proclaimed king.

DEFEAT OF HABIBULLA.

A long campaign followed and in October 1929, Nadir's brother Shah Wali entered Kabul. Habibullah fled, but was captured and executed by the decision of a council of chiefs.

Nadir was unanimously elected King by the National Assembly. In a proclamation he pronounced for equal rights for all. Prohibition, an elected Parliament, and constitutional government, the development of trade, agriculture, and education and the building of railways and irrigation canals.

The Westernising movement initiated by Amanullah soon revived and Kabul residents discarded beards and Eastern clothing for European dress. But Nadir made no attempt to force the pace in the matter of reforms. He was recognised by Britain in November 1929 and Amanullah offered to serve as his Minister in Rome.

FRIENDLY TO BRITAIN.

Afghanistan has been quiet ever since, although the independent spirit of the Afghans prevented Nadir Khan from displaying his friendly feelings towards Great Britain too openly on all occasions, there was no doubt concerning the immense improvement in Anglo-Afghan relations in the last two or three years.

Nadir Khan was a man who knew his own mind and had progressive ideas, but was shrewd enough to realise the importance of carrying his people with him.

The assassination will cause concern in Delhi.—Reuter and Special.

CONTROL OF LIQUOR

AMERICA'S NEW PROBLEM

Washington, Nov. 8. The Farm Administration has created a beverage section for the control of the beer and liquor industries through marketing agreements and possibly the social aspects of distribution.

The control of the liquor problem by this special organisation will hold good until Congress has enacted suitable legislation.—Reuter.

INDO-CHINA IN TIN SCHEME

REPORTED JOINING IN JANUARY

London, Nov. 8. Indo-China has signed an agreement officially to join the International Tin Restriction Scheme on a flat rate from January 1, 1934.

The announcement is made by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Financial Times.—Reuter.

London, Nov. 8. A bulletin issued regarding the Princess Royal, who yesterday underwent an operation for appendicitis, states that her condition this morning is satisfactory.—British Wireless.

GERMANY'S DEMAND

THE CRUX OF DISARMAMENT

LORDS' DEBATE

London, Nov. 8. The House of Lords to-night debated disarmament, the line of argument following closely that in the House of Commons.

Lord Hailsham, replying to the debate, pointed out that Baron von Neurath's reply to a question as to what Germany meant by "sample" armaments, did not refer to samples, but proposed that Germany should commence to disarm immediately and attain equality of the "kind of scale we are ultimately to receive as soon as a Convention is signed."

CRUX OF PROBLEM.

The crux of the problem, said Lord Hailsham, was to overcome Germany's resentment at her inferiority and at the same time to meet France's claim to reasonable security.

Until then, there would be no real progress. Britain was now conferring actively with the Powers having the largest armaments, which would have to be regulated or destroyed under the Convention.

Britain did not rule out any kind of disarmament which would meet with general acceptance.—Reuter.

CUBA REBELLION

STATE OF WAR DECLARED

HEAVY HAVANA CASUALTIES

Havana, Nov. 8.

The expected upheaval in Cuba has come. President Grau San Martin has declared a state of war throughout the country.

Grave disturbances occurred in Havana, where the populace seem to be in open rebellion. Fighting went on throughout the day at different points.

The casualty list in the capital alone is stated to be not less than 32 killed and a hundred wounded. Widespread anti-Government movements are reported from other parts of the island.—Reuter.

NEW PLAN FOR WORKLESS

INSURANCE ACTS TO BE AMENDED

London, Nov. 8.

A Government bill to amend the Unemployment Insurance Acts, and to make further provision for the training and assistance of unemployed who are capable of, and available for, work was introduced in the House of Commons.

The Bill will not be proceeded with this session which ends on November 17, when House will be prorogued.

The Bill will be reintroduced in new session, which the King will open on November 24.—British Wireless.

DISARMAMENT BUREAU

MEETING TO BE HELD TO-MORROW

London, Nov. 8. As neither the French nor the Italian Governments will be represented by Ministers at the Disarmament Bureau to-morrow, the British Government delegate will be Mr. Cadogan of the Foreign Office.

Sir John Simon and Captain Anthony Eden will remain in London for the next few days for the necessary consultation, but it is hoped that one of them will leave for Geneva some time next week.—British Wireless.

A Dinner Dance will be held at Regulus Bay Hotel on Saturday and a Tea Dance on Sunday from 4.30 p.m. to 6.30 p.m.

UNEMPLOYMENT FUND

Now Solvent and Paying Off Debts

London, Nov. 8.

During the current financial year, the unemployment fund owing to the improved conditions of employment, has accumulated a surplus on insurance account of about £5,250,000.

As this appears to be more than sufficient to provide against winter contingencies, the Minister of Labour has decided to apply half of it towards repayment of borrowings by the Fund which total £150,000,000. Repayment is being made at various parts of the debt fall due.—British Wireless.

SKIPTON ELECTION

CONSERVATIVES RETAIN SEAT

BY A REDUCED MAJORITY

London, Nov. 8.

The result of the Skipton by-election, caused by the death of Mr. E. R. Bird, was declared to-night as follows:

G. Richards (Con.) 18,136
J. Davies (Labour) 14,167
R. Denby (Lib.) 9,219
J. Rushton (Com.) 704

The Communist candidate forfeits his deposit. Mr. Richards' majority of roughly 4,000 compares with a victory by 14,900 votes for the late Mr. Bird in the 1931 General Election, in a straight fight with Mr. Davies.

The Labour vote is up by 1,103, and the Conservative down by nearly 10,000, this being largely accounted for by the fact that many Liberals voted for Skipton in 1931.—British Wireless.

HONGKONG-MANILA AIR SERVICE

Franchise Request Shelved

Manila, Nov. 8.

It is reported that the Legislature has shelved Pan-American Airways' request for a twenty-five year franchise in connexion with the proposed Hongkong-Manila air mail and passenger service.—Reuter.

LORD LUGARD AND UNIVERSITY

EFFORT TO GET MORE FUNDS

CHINA DEBATE IN LORDS

London, Nov. 8.

Lord Lugard, former Governor of Hongkong, whose keen interest in the University is well-known, suggested a further contribution to its funds from the Boxer Indemnity during the debate on China in the House of Lords to-night.

Lord Lugard, former Governor of Hongkong urged every effort to cement strong friendly relations, and Lord Addington stressed the growing feeling that the British Legation should be moved from Peking either to Nanking or to Shanghai.

He also expressed regret at the reduction of British forces in Shanghai.

Lord Stanhope informed Lord Lugard that this was impossible.

Lord Melchett supported Lord Peel and referred to the recent journey of the head of the Imperial Chemicals, Sir Harry MacGowan, to China.

He said he wished that the example would be followed by other leading industrialists. Lord Stanhope, replying for the Government, mentioned that "Dr. Sun Yat-sen once invited him to participate in one of China's revolutions."

As regards Chinese trade, he welcomed the recent visit of Sir Harry MacGowan to China. The Government's policy, he said, was one of sincere friendliness to China. Our aim was to maintain cordial relations with the constituted government.

NATIONAL SENTIMENT.

Lord Stanhope said that Britain had tried to meet China's national aspiration in the fullest measure and had recognised the strong national sentiment throughout the country.

As regards Lord Peel's suggestion of a gendarmerie, therefore, the Government thought that the first move should come from China. If such a suggestion was made, the Government would do their best to see what assistance could be given.

LEGATION ISSUE.

The question of the removal of the Legation had been periodically considered, but the governments had not, up to the present, considered the change to be necessary or desirable.

It was doubtful whether any real increase in efficiency would result.

The question was also complicated by important considerations of health and expense.

SHANGHAI PROBLEMS.

The Government spokesman also pointed out that the Chinese Government had once or twice transferred their capital and the permanent removal of the British Legation to Nanking would entail some risk of being made in vain.

He emphasised that Peking was greatly superior to Nanking or Shanghai from a health point of view.

The alternative of Shanghai was also objectionable because it had its own special problems, which might absorb the Minister's energy.

H.K. UNIVERSITY ISSUE.

He also showed that the Government had no power to devote any further money from the Boxer Fund to the Hongkong University, as Lord Lugard had proposed.

Continuing, he asserted that the British Government had done more than any other power to demonstrate their friendliness and their sympathy with the reasonable aspirations of the Chinese people. The problem of further progress was one only the Chinese could solve. It was difficult to see what Britain could do which would not involve interference in Chinese affairs.—Reuter.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

A Summer Mystery BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

CHAPTER XXI

"On the Road Back."

"Do you know, Mr. Sefton, I believe we're getting somewhere," observed Inspector Root, after a thoughtful pause, during which the minds of both men were busy on now material. "We can build a bit more into our picture. Half-an-hour ago I learned definitely that a stranger was talking earnestly with Mr. Fyne."

"May I ask how you got that information?" interposed Leonard. "Certainly. This is a queer business, and I've had to move warily. I've felt like you about it—that one might ask too many questions up at the hotel. But I did get on the track of all the guests who left on the day Mr. Fyne disappeared, hoping they might be able to tell me something. Well, one of 'em has told me something. On his way to the station, he passed Mr. Fyne and this stranger in a little wood by the roadside. He says that Mr. Fyne was looking very startled, and the stranger was talking excitedly."

"Well done," said Leonard, approvingly. "I admit, it wasn't so bad," replied the inspector. "But of what use would the information have been but for your own information, Mr. Sefton? The two things fit like a glove. Not only have you located my man—who might never have been located—but you've located him here! We can stop chasing shadows, and chase substance. It's pretty obvious to me that this wild fellow of ours will know where Mr. Fyne went to that night—and why—or that they went together, for the same reason. Now, if they went together, we've only got to lay our hands on Mr. Fyne's companion to reach the bottom of the whole Marmad mystery."

"You think, then, that he will also be able to solve the mystery of the murdered man?"

Leonard shook his head doubtfully. "I may be wrong, inspector, but frankly I don't. Again I'm only giving you an impression—as I did about the colour of the beard—but it's a pretty strong impression. I think our wild man was as astonished to find the body on the boat as we were. And he was certainly more disturbed."

"Confound it, that's true," muttered Root. "This is quite the queerest case I've been on. You can't find a straight current anywhere. It's all cross currents."

"I believe Mr. Griddle knows something about the wild man,"

continued Leonard, "for he questioned me rather closely about him—only, at that time, I didn't have my beard shaved. But the Luigi business seems to be another cross-current."

"Ah, and I've got something to tell you about that," interrupted the inspector. "You know that bicycle that disappeared from the shed at the hotel?"

"Yes."

"Well, we've got it. Yes, I'm afraid Luigi will have a pretty serious reckoning one day. We mustn't strike too soon, however, or we might lose the bagful."

"Did the bicycle tell you anything?" asked Leonard, curiously. "Oh, quite a nice little amount! Luigi's a bit of a fool. He dropped the bicycle into a pond, and I'll say that he was wise enough to find the deep end. But we've fished the bicycle out since."

"And found?"

"That neither of the brakes work, and both show symptoms of having been tampered with. There are also other marks on the frame which suggest fruitless attempts to weaken it by sawing. Nothing definite, you understand."

"But enough to convince you that Luigi meant his predecessor Anderson to have an accident," interposed Leonard, "so that he could step into his shoes?"

"You've got it exactly. Luigi will be lucky if he escapes hanging. It's possible he's got more than one victim on his conscience, eh?"

"If you mean the man who was lying at the foot of the gap, I don't agree," replied Leonard. "Luigi didn't kill him. For, as I've said, do I think our wild man had anything to do with it. It was the seaman who undertook that little business—the seaman whose coat lacks that little gold button I've shown you, and that bit of blue serge."

"God, what a maza!" exclaimed Root, and for a moment he looked almost desperate. Then his teeth snapped together, and he added, grimly, "And that seaman chap can't be far off, either! Well, we must surround our net. I wish I had a few more men, though. I'll have to get through and ask for further supplies."

"I'm one more, if you want me," suggested Leonard. "Thanks—of course, I want you," answered the other. "But it'll be an all night job, you know."

"Well, if it's too soon to get up, it's also too late to go to bed, so why worry?" smiled Leonard. "I'm game, anyway. And Mr. Truelove, I know, will do anything he can. At present he's guarding the castle."

"Perhaps he'd better go on guarding the castle," mused the inspector. "Well, use your own discretion. I think you'd better get back to the hotel now, anyway, and see that everything's all quiet there, and I'll send a man after you. Maybe I'll come along myself."

"Good," nodded Leonard, rising. "What's your plan?"

"A very simple and obvious one. I've got to get through to other stations at once, to warn them of the position. Then I'll spread my men around and search the district for our interesting friends. Since we're looking for three people—including Mr. Fyne—we surely ought to have the luck to find one of 'em. And then, of course, there's that wreck. I'll have to go out to that. I could use two scores of men to-night, if I only had them."

"On the point of leaving, Leonard asked:

"I suppose you haven't a spare bicycle? It's a long walk!"

"Take mine," answered the inspector, readily. "It's in the hall."

"But won't you need it?"

"No. One of my pals runs the bicycle shop next door, and I have a key and permission to use it. Also, the State has provided me with a car. And now you'd better hurry, sir, or you'll find someone at the hotel before you."

A minute later, Leonard was on his way back to Cravenly Point. Matters were moving faster than he had anticipated, and his mind was full of conjectures. He wondered whether any, or all, of the three people for whom a search was about to be organised would be found before morning, and what explanations they would offer—if he thought somewhat morbidly, they were in a condition to offer explanations. The picture was still dark, as were the lanes he cycled through, but light was filtering towards it from strange sources.

Half-a-mile from the hotel, as the church clock struck four, a shape grew out of the blackness ahead of him and entered the arena of his lamp's light. He pulled up sharply, and jumped off his machine with an exclamation.

"Miss Fyne!" he cried. "What's happened?"

"I'm disobeying orders," she replied, and there was relief in her tone. "I couldn't sleep."

"Yes, but why are you out here?" he asked.

"Why are you?" she parried.

"I've been to the police-station."

"You didn't tell me." There was a hint of reproach in her voice.

"That was only because I didn't want you to worry more than was necessary," he answered quickly. "I wanted you to go straight to bed and to forget things were happening for a few hours."

"I guessed that was the reason, Mr. Sefton, when I saw you slipping out of the hotel."

"You saw me?" he exclaimed. "Well, that's humiliating! I thought I slipped out so quietly!"

"You did."

"Then all I can say, Miss Fyne, is that you must have been watching for me to go! Were you?"

She nodded. "Why?"

"I'm anxious for you—naturally," she responded, after a little hesitation. "You're taking such risks."

"Nonsense! A walk to a police-station isn't a big risk."

"It is, on a night like this."

"Then it's just as big a risk to come chasing people who are walking to police-station," he said, reprovingly.

"She smiled while she admitted his point."

"Perhaps," she returned. "But I've only come just a little of the way. Mr. Sefton, now that you've notified the police, I don't want you to go on taking risks for me, please."

"I can't stop now. I'm in the middle of things, and have got to see them through."

"Please," she repeated. "If anything should happen to you—I'd feel so wretchedly responsible."

"Nothing's going to happen to me. And, anyway, there'd be no need for you to feel responsible at all. This was bound to happen."

"Bound to happen? I don't understand."

"Are you a fatalist?"

"What I meant was," he explained, "you are not the only reason why I am doing all this."

The frown grew, and took on a new quality.

"I see," she said.

"You don't see," he retorted. "Because if the other reason did not exist—well, I should be doing it just the same. Which is another way of saying, Miss Fyne, that you are my first thought in this affair, but there'd be another reason to drive me on even if you weren't."

"It's nice of you to put it like that," she answered, now frowning no more. "Will you be nicer still and tell me what that other reason is? You've hinted at it before, you know. Was it the other reason," she added, suddenly, "that brought you here?"

He nodded.

"So you see, Miss Fyne, you've no need to worry about personal responsibility in the matter. You've not brought these shadows into my life. On the contrary, you've brought—"

He stopped abruptly, and they spoke no more until they reached the entrance to the hotel. Possibly they thought a good deal, however. Possibly, also, they might have given some expression to their thoughts before entering the grounds had not a new matter abruptly entered them. A figure moved on the other side of the hedge.

The figure was moving stealthily, and they drew aside instinctively as it approached the gate that led to the lane. The gate softly opened, and the figure emerged, peering hard at the ground as it did so. Its scrutiny was assisted by a small spot-light.

"Jim!" exclaimed Leonard, as he recognised the figure by its attitude and diminutive size.

"O!" yelled Jim, jumping.

"What are you doing?"

Jim gulped, and regained his composure.

"Trackin' 'im," said Jim.

"Him? Whom?"

"Looly, 'E's gorn. But I'm trackin' 'im."

And, as though fearing that his laudable intentions might be thwarted if he stayed, he suddenly darted away and was swallowed up by the darkness.

"Well, let him go," muttered Leonard, grimly. "The hares are becoming so numerous, we want all the hounds we can muster!"

They crossed the lawn, and another figure emerged from the shadows.

"Who's that?" called Leonard, sharply.

"Friend," came this reply.

"Night-watchman."

Leonard wiped his brow.

"Why aren't you inside, Truelove?" he asked.

"Cos I'm outside," returned Napoleon. "I'm lookin' for a slippery old man called Griddle."

Another AMAZING CASE

A Letter Which Speaks For Itself.

ONE MAN BANISHES 6 COMPLAINTS More Triumphs For YEAST-VITE

Brand Tonic Tablets.

The great value of "Yeast-Vite" as an ALL ROUND remedy—even for those whose health is completely broken down—is fully evidenced by the remarkable letter below.

Gentlemen,—I feel I must write my thanks to you. I had until recently the following troubles:—

- (1) Severe Headaches.
- (2) Indigestion, Pains, Stomach-ness.
- (3) Bad Sleep.
- (4) Bad Nerves.

I have now taken three bottles of your "Yeast-Vite" Tablets and the result is wonderful.

- (1) No more throbbing headaches.
- (2) Indigestion, thank goodness, has gone, and the terrible pains.
- (3) Sleep more refreshing and sound.
- (4) Nerves are sound, and I walk with a care-free step.

I am writing this in honest thankfulness for restored health. I still have a few "Yeast-Vite" Tablets, and in our firm if any of my fellow employees are feeling below par, or if the lady assistants have a headache, I give them "Yeast-Vite," and am only too glad to relieve their suffering. Yours sincerely and gratefully, F. L. East Ham.

To YOU, who perhaps have suffered for so long that you have despaired of ever being well again, the above letter must seem extraordinary. Yet WE are constantly receiving similar tributes KNOW that "Yeast-Vite" is REGULARLY performing such amazing Health Wonders. Why therefore continue to suffer?

If you cannot get Yeast-Vite from your usual Chemist—and nearly all in Hong Kong stock it—write to or call on

SCIENTIST TELLS OF AMAZING NEW RECIPE

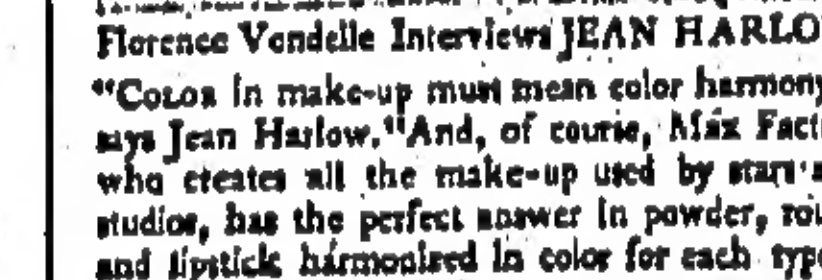

Extraordinary laboratory tests made with a new face powder formula have definitely proved that any woman can now obtain a beautiful, youthful complexion and entirely banish shiny nose, blotches and the worst complexion defects. The ingredient which makes this remarkable difference is called mouse of cream. It makes the powder stay on all day long even in windy or rainy weather, and in spite of perspiration while dancing or playing games. The entire world's rights to this amazing new formula have been acquired by Tokalon. Mouse of Cream is now scientifically blended in exactly the right proportions by a patented process with the finest air-floated powder in Poudre Tokalon. Try a box of Poudre Tokalon, the only Mouse of Cream face powder today. The immediate and tremendous improvement to your appearance will be the admiration and envy of your friends. 829.

Is Make-Up in Color Harmony? Secret of Attraction? Florence Vendelle Interviews JEAN HARLOW "Colors in make-up must mean color harmony," says Jean Harlow. "And, of course, Max Factor, who creates all the make-up used by stars and studios, has the perfect answer in powder, rouge and lipstick harmonized in color for each type."

1. "To harmonize with my complexion coloring... platinum blonde hair, very fair skin and blue eyes... Max Factor's Face Powder is perfect. So soft and fine in texture, it blends naturally with the skin, creating a soft-smooth make-up that I know will cling for hours."

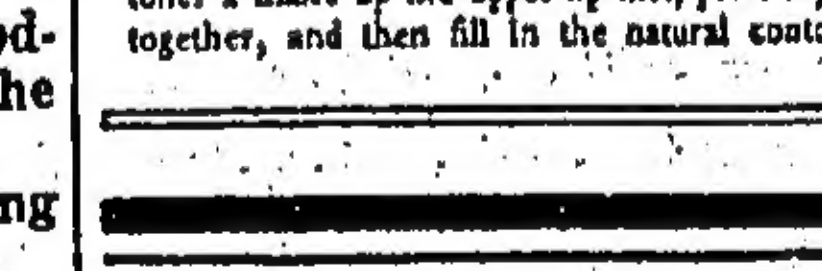

2. "Rouge should impart a lifelike, delicate flush of color, and I find Max Factor's Flame Rouge the correct color harmony for my type. Creamy-smooth in texture, it blends easily and clings perfectly. And here's a hint... put it on lightly, blend with fingertips to give an added richness of coloring."

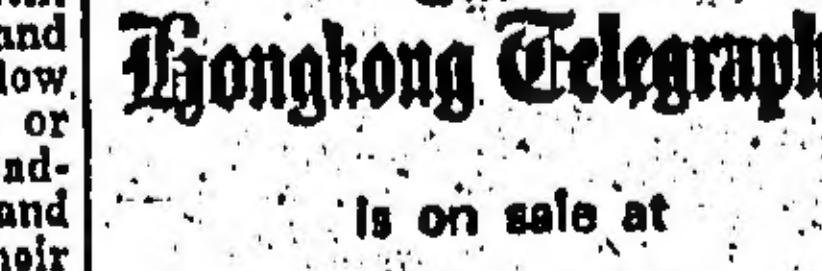

3. "Lip make-up is so important... it must be moisture proof, it must be permanent in color! It must harmonize with your coloring, your powder and your rouge. So I use Max Factor's Super-Indelible Lipstick... Flame is my color harmony tone. I make up the upper lip first, press my lip together, and then fill in the natural contour."

RENEW YOUR VIGOUR WITH ENO

Although many people blame weariness of body on too overwork or long hours, usually the real cause is the accumulation of poisons in the blood due to unsuspected constipation. You may not think you are constipated, but Nature is warning you that your system is not completely ridding itself of its daily waste.

Do not allow constipation to rob you of that vigour which means real health. Adopt the pleasant practice of taking a sparkling glass of ENO's "Fruit Salt" on rising every morning, and keep your system thoroughly free from the stagnating poisons that so quickly sap your vitality. LOCAL SPORTSMAN
MARRIEDCEREMONY AT UNION CHURCH
YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

A well-known local sportsman, Mr. "Lollie" Goldman, was married yesterday afternoon to Miss Elizabeth Stuart Black Laling, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Laling of Troon, Scotland. Mr. Laurence Goldman is the son of Mrs. C. Goldman of Singapore, and the late Mr. D. Goldman.

The marriage was celebrated at the Union Church, Kennedy Road, by the Rev. E. G. Powell, while Mr. G. E. Longyear played appropriate music at the organ.

The bride who was given away by Mr. C. W. E. Bishop wore a graceful "Eunice" model with high neck tied at the back and finished with long ends—the bodice of Poau d'ange lace and the skirt of Ivory Bridal Satin, a skillfully twisted girdle and rather high waistline held by a cluster of orange blossoms were unique. The train of Bridal satin embodied a wide panel of lace trailing in a point behind. A beautifully hand-embroidered net veil lent by Mrs. S. D. Bogg was held by tiny orange blossoms at the nape of the neck. The bride carried a sheaf of white heather and choice orchids, the gift of Mr. S. D. Bogg.

The bridesmaid Miss Joan Churchill, wore a charming gown by "Eunice" of powder blue tulle over morocaino daintily dotted with tiny silver sequins. A silver lace cap and mittens were also worn. Instead of flowers the bridesmaid carried a muff of tulle and silver lace finished with white heather and pink rose-buds.

Mrs. C. W. E. Bishop was matron of honour and wore a dress of green morocain and chiffon velvet made by Madame D'Obry. Mr. F. R. Burch carried out the duties of best man.

A reception was later held at 1, Leighton Hill, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. E. Bishop. After the usual toasts had been honoured the bride and bridegroom left for Fanning on their honeymoon. The bride's going-away apparel was a smart ensemble of Nattine blue freize with the new "swagger" coat and hat trimmed with dove grey—shoes, bag and gloves toning—also by "Eunice."

NADIR KHAN

The tragic death of Nadir Khan, King of Afghanistan, is as disturbing to New Delhi as it is to Kabul. Nadir Khan was a bulwark of stability on India's most difficult frontier and the events following his assassination will be watched with keenest anxiety. His four years of kingship were marked by increasing friendship with Britain after an era of dispute, and internally Afghanistan made rapid progress as he did not make the mistake of Amanullah of trying to force his countrymen to adopt new ideas by the mere issue of sensational edicts. Rather, he endeavoured to ensure the internal peace of his kingdom. He was what every Afghan ruler to be successful must be, a man of strong character. He returned to Afghanistan in 1929 to save the maladministration that followed the seizure of supreme power by the brigand chief who was responsible for Amanullah's downfall. Nadir Khan started his campaign as the loyal henchman of Amanullah, while having no illusions about Amanullah's unpopularity with the conservative elements of a backward country which the late King had so rashly attempted to modernise without taking into account the inevitable revolt of the mullahs. Nadir Khan held the position of Commander-in-Chief of the Afghan armies at the time when Habibullah Khan was somewhat mysteriously murdered in 1919. There were many at the time who accused him of being directly responsible for Habibullah's murder, and the troops in Jellalabad actually arrested him and kept him in custody pending Amanullah's decision about his fate. Amanullah eventually decided to supersede Nadir Khan in his position as Commander-in-Chief, and had him removed to Khost. When, a month or two later, Amanullah foolishly decided upon war with India, he could not do without the services of his tried general. This war was a disastrous one for Afghanistan, and Nadir Khan was the only Afghan leader who displayed any enterprise. Up to this time Nadir Khan had been anything but friendly towards Britain. With most of his fellow-countrymen, he entertained a strong suspicion of the Government of India's frontier policy, and during the Great War he was generally credited with having distinct leanings towards an open alliance with Germany and Turkey. His experiences, however, in the Afghan War of 1919, taught him considerable respect for British arms, and his subsequent visit to Europe quite cured him of his anti-British tendencies. His death will be deeply deplored.

NOTES OF THE DAY

CUNARD MERGER

With arrangements for the merger of the Cunard and White Star lines practically complete, we may expect soon to learn that work has been resumed on the great Cunard new liner, unfinished on the Clyde. For the combine is not entirely inspired by common interests. The Cunard desired Government assistance in the building of their new mammoth ship and the opportunity was seized to obtain in return some rationalisation of the shipping industry and the elimination of competition between the two principal Transatlantic companies. Two birds were thus killed with one stone; the Government makes a valuable contribution to the temporary alleviation of unemployment in Glasgow and at the same time asserts in a new form the closer governmental control being exercised over industry and commerce.

ECONOMIC POLICY

Negotiations between the White Star and Cunard were long drawn out. It was not a question of the amount proper of two great rivals—each reluctant to sink its individuality, although the arrangement was not entirely out of the minds of the directors. The real issue that had to be overcome concerned policy. The White Star has always been a believer in small ships, in the 20,000-ton category, the Cunard in the super-liner. In days of depression such as these the White Star probably had the better of the argument; most giant ships are running at a loss to-day. In normal times, however, it is essential that British shipping prestige be maintained. If Britain does not provide the big ships, however, luxuriously fitted and speedy the smaller craft, travellers will simply be attracted to the German, French and Italian crack liners. Backed by the unfinished hulk on the Clyde and Government influence on the side of completion, the Cunard people seem to have gained the day, probably to the final benefit of the shareholders of both concerns.

OPIUM LOOPHOLE

The importance of the meanings of words, some of which have a variety of shades, is again emphasised by the result of the appeal of the Crown against Mr. Butters' interpretation of the Opium Ordinance. The Crown endeavoured to stretch the scope of the word "occupier" to mean householder or principal tenant, but the Appeal Judges would have none of it and the whole object of the recent amendments to the Ordinance is clearly defeated. There is no doubt that it was the intention of the Legislature to cover the situation which existed in the prosecution that came under review; equally there is no doubt that the new sub-section was not so constructed as to accomplish the intention. A loophole was left and of course the lawyers found it. It merely shows the extreme care essential in the employment of words. Half Britain's misunderstandings with the United States, for instance, would not have arisen but for slightly different shades of meaning which are applied on opposite sides of the Atlantic to certain words.

WAR DEBTS

Comments by the Middle West on the war debt situation have revealed the seriousness of the word interpretation difficulty on more than one occasion. Speeches by British statesmen addressed primarily to the Middle West have misfired because frank explanations of transfer problems have been read as warnings of repudiation. It might eventually come to that; though the time is not yet by a long way, and both the United States and Britain will undoubtedly strain every effort to avert such a possibility. Certain it is that Britain will never resume payments on the old scale; not because she is unwilling to meet her obligations, but because such a resumption would be essentially destructive of financial stability in both countries. The trouble is to get the bulk of the American people to appreciate the technical side of the problem. They have been told so long that revision or cancellation would mean settling the burden upon the American taxpayer that they almost regard the debts as owing to the community at large. And to attempt to explain to an Iowa farmer the difference between the internal payments of a government, on armaments, for instance, and external payments, would be as futile as suggesting a close season for road-trenching in Hong-kong.

SAVE OUR SHIPS!

By Sir ABE BAILEY, Kt., K.C.M.G.

BRITISH shipping is fighting for its life.

I believe that only the Empire, acting as a single whole, can save it. That is why I am urging an early Imperial Conference to consider the ways and means of instituting a common Empire shipping policy and nothing else.

This question has been brought by the action of the South African Government in granting a subsidy of £150,000 a year to the Italian lines with the idea of retaining and increasing its meat trade with Italy.

I have denounced that action, and I mean to go on denouncing it, as fatal to that co-operation between all the units in the British Commonwealth of nations which is essential to their prosperity.

British shipping takes first place in our national, our international, and our Imperial services and interests. The very existence of the Empire depends more on shipping than on anything else.

Before the war British ships carried about 52 per cent. of the world's seaborne trade.

To-day they carry hardly more than 40 per cent.

Since 1914 such countries as Sweden, Holland, France, Spain, Denmark and Greece have doubled or very nearly doubled their seagoing tonnage. Italy and Norway have more than doubled theirs. Japan shows a still greater increase, and the United States has, on paper, a Mercantile Marine five times as great as before the war.

Britain, on the other hand, has some 300,000 tons less than in 1914.

On all oceans and on nearly all routes British shipping has now to meet the competition of heavily subsidised foreign vessels. These vessels will never pay their way on an economic basis. They were built and are being operated at the taxpayers' expense for the sake of "prestige" and to foster home industries.

The subsidy is the submarine of commerce. State-aided ships, like "dumped goods," disrupt the market and make ordinary commercial operations unprofitable.

Foreign nations are spending some £30,000,000 a year on subsidising the building or the running of these "pirate" vessels. Meanwhile, our giant Cunard remains idle on the stocks and threatens to become the Waterloo Bridge of the shipping world.

The State-aided foreigner is cutting with deadly destructiveness into British shipping, not only on the main routes but also in the inter-imperial carrying trade.

Within the last few days Italian vessels have been chartered to load grain from Australia to Europe at totally uncommercial rates with which British owners cannot even pretend to compete.

Another Italian ship not long ago completed a round voyage entirely within the British Empire. Her tour of 13,000 miles earned her a gratuity of more than £1,100 from the Italian Government, and this enabled her to undercut British ships at every British port she touched.

The sugar growers of Mauritius are given a preference of some 24 per ton in the United Kingdom market. But their sugar is being increasingly brought here by subsidised Italian ships.

Or look at the Indian trade, the historic preserve of the P. and O. The Italians have put on the Genoa-Bombay route, a new ship for which the Government found most of the money and for which it pays the Suez Canal dues.

This vessel is being largely patronised by British officers and Civil Servants in India for their voyage home, though their passage money is provided for them by the Government—that is to say by the British taxpayer.

British money is thus being used by British officials to support a heavily subsidised Italian ship against the vessels of one of the oldest and most famous of British shipping companies.

I have no doubt that the new 50,000-tonners, running direct to New York, will attract to the Italian ports much of the American freight and passenger traffic that formerly came to Great Britain and France.

Will they pay? Will the motor-driven Neptune on the Trieste-South America route pay? Or her sister-ship Oceania?

Nobody seems to care whether they do or not. These are not ships in the ordinary sense. They are strokes of State policy. They are items in the Mussolini programme for putting Italy on the map.

All the leading countries in the world have taken a hand in the mad game—all except Great Britain. For the past seven years, since the death of the Trade Facilities Act, no Governmental aid of any kind has been extended to British shipbuilding.

British owners, apparently, would not have it otherwise. They hate the whole policy of subsidies, bounties, and discriminations. Free access to an open freight market is their ideal.

But that ideal is vanishing beneath their very noses. Not only Italy, but America, Germany, France, and Japan have plunged into the subsidy business. In every direction British shipping finds itself squeezed and undercut. It is fighting a losing battle—out of its own resources against the illimitable funds and facilities placed by State after State at the service of its competitors.

What is to be the end of it? British owners hoped at the World Economic Conference to persuade the other Governments to give up subsidies altogether, to leave shipping and shipbuilders alone, and to restore absolute equality of treatment to all ships under all flags in all ports.

That hope they must now abandon. The foreigners are not going to give up subsidies. They are going to increase them. Along present lines there is nothing ahead of British shipping but a continuous and cumulative process of attrition and decline.

In two respects they may themselves be contributing to this process. A British vessel in 1892 made the trip from England to Capetown in fourteen days. To-day, forty-one years later, the same voyage takes seventeen days. That looks to me like "naking for it."

Again, the policy of selling old but still seaworthy ships to competitors abroad, who will operate them on lower wages, cheaper food, and smaller crews, seems (Continued on Page 9.)

The Very Idea!

MORE PROPAGANDA

The Russian best-seller of the moment, we read, is a two-volume "Ideological" novel called "Energy," by Feodor Vasilievich Gladkov, which deals with the building of the hydro-electric Dnieprostroi dam.

It appears to be a heavy bore, like—for that matter—those celebrated Russian novels of the old regime about little dull suburban towns full of dust, dogs, retired generals with dyed whiskers, sly officials, lilac-trees, faded spinsters, muzzy chatter, smells, samovars, and suicide. In such towns, whenever there is a tea-party in Society, everybody turns despairingly aside at intervals and mutters: "My God! What people!" The mumbling is interminable and the philosophy, like a sick headache.

The new school of Russian fiction seems brisker, but equally as boring.

Envelop, all this in endless gabble, and in an apothecia of Lahn, with fireworks and haloes, and you have the goods.

Incidentally the formula for the current Soviet novel, or play, is so simple that anybody can do it. Nutehell example:

SCENE: The new power-station at Sorotchinsk. Alexey Alezovich, a virtuous Young Communist, working furiously and exhorting his comrades. One of these, Catherine, embraces him suddenly.

ALEXEY: Why, comrade?

CATHERINE (stupidly): I love you.

ALEXEY: Constructive Marxism has no room for that! (Hits her with a piston rod. She falls. Enter an agent of the OGPU.)

AGENT: Comrades, there is sabotage! A leg has been found in the machinery! (To Alexey) Yours?

ALEXEY (very pale): Yes, comrade!

Enter a Commissar, hastily. COMMISSAR: Comrades, the peasants have struck! There will be no harvest! We are ruined!

ALEXEY (in a hoarse voice): No, comrade! (Hops out, gathers in harvest, harangues peasants, raises volunteer force of city tram-inspectors and laundry-men to shame peasants, installs them on land, makes 308 speeches on Marxism and the Five Year Plan, and hops back to Sorotchinsk, where Catherine at once embraces him again.)

CATHERINE: I have told them! Your leg—it was a pure accident! I love you!

ALEXEY (stunning her with a spanner): The warriors of the Proletariat have no time for that!

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER

THE recent sensation caused by Lord Raglan, who stated that many of the most revered and ancient family trees are bogus, has relieved several people in Hongkong. A certain taipan who is now nearly a millionaire says that Lord Raglan has definitely proved the falseness of his own family tree, which traces his ancestry back to a grocer's assistant in Whitechapel in Stiff Neck, Arizona.

MUG'S DISEASE

The eminent pathologist Professor Goof has segregated yet another germ. It is responsible, he says, for the virulent Benedictitis or Purl-and-Plain Disease, and generally for the group of afflictions which are classed under the heading Mug's Disease.

The onset invariably coincides with the finishing of a row of knitting by the victim's wife. There is no warning, as a rule. Simply a staccato "Count that!" The disease has been known to last 244 stitches (in the case of K.O.S. jumpers). Should the patient be absorbed in the intertext cricket news at the moment he is attacked, extreme irritability is likely to be present. Eye-strain is a concomitant, and there is often a temporary loss of memory.

The faculty of resisting should be stressed. This disease must be allowed to run the course.

Closely allied to it is the dreaded Stein-Holder's Disease. Chief symptoms are a dull, glassy look, indicative of morbidity, and the peculiar position of the hands, which are held out rigidly about three feet apart during the attack. The patient often complains of a pain in the neck.

Should complications arise, it is advisable to consult a brain specialist.

These diseases assume epidemic proportions during the winter months. Professor Goof expects no abatement in the winter.

"I like to curl up with a good book."

BADMINTON AT K.C.C.

DEMONSTRATIONS LAST NIGHT

PRESIDENT TAKES PART

Badminton officially came into being at the Kowloon Cricket Club last night, when this new section of the club was opened with a series of exhibition matches.

A first rate court had been made in the main hall, and although the lighting presented some little difficulty to the players, the conditions were, in every other respect, admirable.

Mr. R. E. Lindell, President of the Club, and a keen badminton exponent, took part in the demonstration games.

He was partnered by S. A. Gray against A. E. Collins and E. F. Fincher, the latter winning both games of 15 points up.

MIXED DOUBLES.

Subsequently Miss Woolley and Collins contested Miss M. Griffiths and Lindell in a mixed doubles, the former pair winning after two fast and interesting games.

A singles was also indulged in by Gray and Fincher, featured by some hard hitting.

A large number of members turned up and watched the game with interest, and it is reasonable to suggest that badminton will shortly become a most popular pastime at the K.C.C.

JACK HARE RETURNS

WITH NEW BOOK ON BOXING

FAMOUS NAVAL PERSONALITY

Jack Hare, glorified in the Services as the world's champion cook, and recognised by those in the position to judge as being an authority on the gentle art of fistfights, is back in Hongkong again.

This time he has brought with him a new and greatly improved edition of his fascinating brochure "The Knock-Out Blow and How to Avoid It."

Running into 177 pages, it not only covers the historical development of boxing, but, in a series of brightly written chapters, offers a host of valuable hints to the novice, and also provides new points for the boxer who has already proved himself.

INDISPENSABLE LITTLE BOOK.

The reading matter is freely interspersed with interesting pictures, of Jack, when himself a boxer of no mean repute, and of some of the world's champions during the last two or three decades.

Everyone interested in boxing should have this little book in his bookcase. It can be obtained from Messrs. Brewer and Co., for one dollar.

Jack Hare, who has cooked for 750,000 servicemen, is still with the troops in Neualla and is this week returning to Shanghai with her. He wishes, however, to be remembered to all his local friends whom he has not had a chance to look up during his brief stay here.

MATTHIAS SCORES FOUR GOALS

S.W.B. League Player In Form

Matthias, the Borderers league footballer, was in the limelight yesterday, when, playing for the Drummers of the Headquarters Wing, he scored all his side's four goals against the "B" Company of the S.W.B.

The match, played at Happy Valley, was a friendly, and in spite of his goal-scoring effort, Matthias saw his team beaten by eight goals to four.

Howen envied his example for the "B" Company, finding the net four times, and other goals were notched by Lee (2), Marsh, and Dowling.

his side and never really seemed in difficulties though he had not to face Archie Hamilton bowling at his best pace.

THE HONGKONG SIDE.

Faced with the serious loss of his two faster bowlers I thought Owen Hughes managed his bowling excellently. On the whole the fielding was really good (if a little tired after tea) and the catches by Minu and Fincher were well above the average.

Redmond too brought off a most brilliant save when he raced across the screen and reached a tremendous on-drive of R.N. Hamilton's on the first bounce to save the boundary.

It was a gallant performance, enhanced by the fact that they did not lose a wicket during those last dreadful moments. Personally I regard the result as a most open one.

From Cricket Field To Hockey

ERNIE FINCHER'S ACHIEVEMENT

Some brilliant saves by Cross mainly assisted the Royal Corps of Signals from heavier defeat at the hands of the St. Andrew's Club to whom they lost by two goals to nil on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon in a friendly hockey match.

Ernie Fincher, who had been fielding as substitute for the Colony Interport team against Malaya all the afternoon, was the marksman for the Saints on both occasions.

The Saints forward line displayed improved combination. Guest playing his usual steady game at centre-half. The Signals fielded a practically fresh forward line.

The Central British Association suffered their first hockey defeat this season on Tuesday afternoon when they lost to the Royal Engineers by two clear goals at King's Park in a friendly game. The losers fielded a depleted team being without the services of C. C. Francis and N. Whitley.

Y.M.C.A.'S BIG WIN.

The Y.M.C.A. first eleven gained a decisive victory over a Jats team on Tuesday when they won by five goals to one in a splendid friendly hockey encounter on the Marina ground. G. P. Lammet (8), G. H. Fowler, S. Fowler and R. Baldwin scored the goals for the winners.

RADIO WIN.

Playing on a poor pitch at Pokfulam and with a weakened team, the Radio Sports Club managed to defeat the University XI by the odd goal in three yesterday. Chanson and P. Singh scored for the winners in the first half and the University despite a persistent attack were unable to make up the arrears.

RECREIO BEATEN.

The Hongkong Hockey Club seniors easily accounted for the Club de Recreio when they met at King's Park yesterday, winning by four goals to nil. Lieut. Sinclair opened the scoring and G. E. R. Divett added two before half time and another after the interval.

TRIP TO MACAO

ST. JOSEPH'S TEAM TO VISIT COLONY

The St. Joseph's Football Club have arranged for a trip to Macao to play football, tennis and billiards against the Macao Athletic Club on Sunday. Sixteen players will make the trip under the management of Mr. C. A. Goldenberg.

The following will probably comprise the team:—A. V. Gosano (Captain), B. Gosano, D. Leonard, A. Ward, L. Rocha, L. Sahban, J. Elms, V. Costa, N. Beltrao, W. Lawrence, L. Gomes, V. Marques, R. Marques, L. Fernandez and R. M. Omar.

The team will leave on Saturday morning by the Macao boat, and return to the Colony on Monday morning.

RUGBY

CLUB "A" BEAT SUFFOLK

ROBERTSON IN GOOD FORM

(By "Line-out")

A strong Club "A" XV beat H.M.S. Suffolk in a rugby match at Happy Valley yesterday by two goals and a penalty goal (13 points) to a try (3 points).

The Club forwards started very lifelessly, but after settling down gave the backs plenty of opportunities.

Archer ran very well on several occasions, but Griffiths was marked too closely to enable him to give his wing men many chances.

PROFITABLE PARTNERSHIP.

In the first half the Suffolk were penalised in their own 25, and Robertson placed an easy goal. Later on Jenkins scored far out after good passing among the backs. Robertson converted with a fine kick.

In the second half Jenkins scored again and Robertson did the needful from the place kick.

The Suffolk finished very strongly, their forwards playing well in the closing stages. They scored their only points about half way through the second half.

HONGKONG BANK XV.

The Hongkong and Shanghai Bank have selected the following team for their Rugby match against the South Wales Borderers "A" at Sookumpoo on Monday at 5.15 p.m.:—R. P. Edwards, A. D. Lowson, W. H. B. Higgs, B. C. Allan and F. V. Bond; M. W. Turner and L. G. Robertson; F. H. King, R. J. Stillard, H. A. Browning, I. H. Bradford, G. C. Moutrie, D. A. Cumming, F. R. Burch and G. A. Stewart. Capt. Gottwaltz, S.W.B., will referee the game.

RICHARDS' RECORD

KING'S MESSAGE CLUB SENIORS

WIN EASILY

Liverpool, Nov. 8. Having equalled the 48-year old record of season turf victories last week, Gordon Richards, riding to-day, broke the former world mark. By winning the Waver Tree Selling Plate on a 4/11 favourite, Golden King, Richards brought his string of victories for the season to 247.

The former record had stood for almost half a century and was set up by Fred Archer.

A remarkable feature of the record ride was that it occurred on the exact date of Archer's suicide, 47 years ago.

MESSAGE FROM KING.

Richards received a telegram from H.M. the King's private secretary, Sir Clive Wigram, as follows: "I am commanded to express to you His Majesty's congratulations on winning the 247 races and by this splendid achievement establishing a record in the annals of this country."

Jockeys are presenting Richards with a souvenir token of respect and the well-known owner, Mr. Thornton Smith, is presenting Richards with Archer's whip and spurs recently purchased at an auction.

Richards, who is 29, has not yet ridden a Derby winner.

Golden King is owned and trained by Mr. Frank Hartigan and won easily to-day. The jockey received a hearty ovation from the crowd.—Reuter.

TWEED BAY OPERATION

MACHINE-GUN DEFENCE MANOEUVRES

LANDING PARTY BY "ENEMY"

The necessity of maintaining in Hongkong an efficiently trained machine gun beach defence system was demonstrated last evening at Tweed, Bay, when manoeuvres were carried out under the eyes of His Excellency the G.O.C., Major-General O. C. Borrett and members of the General Staff.

The night was an admirable one for testing the powers of observation of the participants. It was pitch black under a starlit sky with a small visibility even with night glasses.

It was noticeable however, that Naval officers present found little difficulty in picking up the target with night glasses, and this points to the necessity of training military personnel in the proper use of this means of detection.

Just before sundown two machine gun teams drawn from the South Wales Borderers and the Machine Gun Company of the H.K.V.D.C., took up position on the right of Tweed Beach with guns paralleled and heavily sand-bagged and trained on D'Agular Point with a range of 800 yards. Their right of fire was given as the point where D'Agular Point met the water and the left of fire the small headland to the left of the beach.

ALARM SOUNDED.

The Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of the gun teams, all trained men, then "retired for the night" within easy call should the alarm be given of the approach of the "enemy." The Nos. 4 on each gun, untrained men, acted as beach watchers. Their duty was, at the first indication of the arrival of enemy boats offshore to sound the alarm, send up an S.O.S. and telephone a warning to the troops.

About ten minutes after men had turned in the low whistle of the alarm sounded and the men rushed for their gun positions. In the meantime the Nos. 4 had released their S.O.S. flare and dashed to the telephone.

TARGET "MISSING".

The objective of the teams was a model cutter, 32 feet long and four feet high with silhouettes of men overhauling the side which was towed at about five knots at 800 yards. The darkness of the night made it impossible for the fire controller to distinguish the target even with glasses.

A rocket was called for. With a swish it went up to illuminate the water for yards around. Still the "enemy" were invisible and Vero lights were resorted to at regular intervals. Still there was no sign of the target.

Then came the order to change position to the rocks below Tweed Point which gave the target range at 400 yards. A similar procedure followed as that carried out on the beach. This time there was no difficulty in picking up the target and the fire controller, laying on just before the objective reached the centre of arc, gave the order "Open Fire." The countryside reverberated with the rattle of the guns as they sent bursts of bullets with deadly effect onto the target. They followed its course until it passed behind the headland. The bolts of ammunition were interspersed with tracer bullets whose phosphorescent glare gave the gunners an idea of the position of the "enemy."

The manoeuvres were brought to a close shortly after 8 p.m. and the party returned to the cliff-top again.

TAIT'S MANILA CARNIVAL

ALL THE FUN OF THE FAIR

Tait's Manila Carnival Show has arrived, and for the last two days scenes of great activity have been noticed at Kowloon.

The show will open on time to-night, the position being the same as last year, on the vacant ground by the side of the Peninsula Hotel, Kowloon.

The slogan of the organisation, which is "Fun for all and all for fun" seems to be a very apt one, as they have in their Carnival such a choice of selection of different forms of amusement that it seems impossible for anyone attending not to find something that just suits their taste, though most who do attend cannot resist having a go at everything.

Five different riding devices have been lined up. The "Dodgem" will probably be the most popular, though a new ride called the "Whip" looks as though one should get a lot of fun out of it. There is also a "Caterpillar," "Big Wheel," and "Merry-go-round."

The "Hawaiian" Cabaret show should prove to be a big drawing card. Captain Charles Bath's "Monkeyland" should also be well patronised, but then, performing monkeys always do draw big crowds.

"Chandu," a great illusion full of mystery, is presented by Professor Raymond.

Quite a new thing in the Circus line is the Filipino Circus. This is their first visit here. Performing Fleas, introduced by Tom Tong, a clever Chinese showman, with a heavy American accent; a "Motor-drome," in which some hair-raising motor-cycling is presented, and the big free act presented by reckless Eddie Phillimore in his "Globe of Death."

These are the chief shows in the Carnival, so given good weather the show should have a very successful season here.

SAVE OUR SHIPS!

one of very doubtful wisdom. A British ship that has come to the end of its usefulness under the Red Ensign is best broken up.

British shipping has waited too long for the world to become sane again. Attacked on every side by economic fanatics, it must organise for its own defence, and it must call in its friends—in this case the peoples and Governments of the Empire—who will follow a clear lead and support a united policy, but who also, if left to themselves, may do as South Africa has done. That is why an Imperial Conference, summoned to consider nothing but the shipping problem, is urgent and vital.

THE THEATRES

"Being the 'young kid' on a motion picture set is one of the greatest advantages an actress can have in Hollywood."

This is the opinion of Loretta Young, one of the screen's most successful "youngsters," who started her career at the tender age of fifteen years with Lou Chatter in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and who since has ascended to stardom in such pictures as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Hunchback of Paris," "The Hunchback of London," "The Hunchback of Rome," "The Hunchback of Vienna," "The Hunchback of Berlin," "The Hunchback of Moscow," "The Hunchback of St. Petersburg," "The Hunchback of Constantinople," "The Hunchback of Athens," "The Hunchback of Jerusalem," "The Hunchback of Baghdad," "The Hunchback of Cairo," "The Hunchback of Alexandria," "The Hunchback of Damascus," "The Hunchback of Aleppo," "The Hunchback of Hama," "The Hunchback of Latakia," "The Hunchback of Tartus," "The Hunchback of Sidon," "The Hunchback of Tyre," "The Hunchback of Beirut," "The Hunchback of Tripoli," "The Hunchback of Lebanon," "The Hunchback of Syria," "The Hunchback of Palestine," "The Hunchback of Transjordan," "The Hunchback of Iraq," "The Hunchback of Persia," "The Hunchback of Arabia," "The Hunchback of Egypt," "The Hunchback of Sudan," "The Hunchback of Ethiopia," "The Hunchback of Somalia," "The Hunchback of Djibouti," "The Hunchback of Madagascar," "The Hunchback of Mauritania," "The Hunchback of Mali," "The Hunchback of Niger," "The Hunchback of Chad," "The Hunchback of Cameroon," "The Hunchback of Gabon," "The Hunchback of Congo," "The Hunchback of Zaire," "The Hunchback of Angola," "The Hunchback of Namibia," "The Hunchback of Botswana," "The Hunchback of Zimbabwe," "The Hunchback of Mozambique," "The Hunchback of Swaziland," "The Hunchback of Lesotho," "The Hunchback of South Africa," "The Hunchback of Swaziland," "The Hunchback of Lesotho," "The Hunchback of South Africa."

"When I first appeared in pictures as a kid I discovered that instead of being handicapped I really benefited by my youth. Everybody extended a helping hand from prop boy to the biggest star," explains Miss Young.

"Lon Chaney gave me my first makeup lesson. He taught me to apply greasepaint so it would not detract from my own skin colour. Workers in the wardrobe department put eight pairs of stockings on my legs and padded my waist with cloth so I could meet Herbert Brenson's requirements for a leading lady in 'Laugh, Clown, Laugh.' When he became exasperated with my work I was saved again by being the 'kid.'"

"During the last few silent pictures I was still a youngster on the set, but when a new kind of film was introduced I was able to improve my makeup again on friendly advice from cameramen. Large scenes and complicated moving shots became the vogue, and being the 'kid' I was tipped off on how to walk and time action to conform to the new technicalities."

"Rackety Rex"
Greta Nissen, feminine lead in "Rackety Rex," has recently now playing at the King's Theatre, has most recently been seen in "Ambassador Bill," "Good Sport" and "The Silent Witness." Previously her best known pictures were "Transatlantic," "Women of All Nations" and "Hill's Angels."

Miss Nissen has a delightful comedy role in "Rackety Rex," that of the platinum blonde assistant of a sporting racketeer who muscles in on college football and makes millions before retribution overtakes him. Victor McLaglen plays the role of the sporting world racketeer.

The part of Voine, the racketeer's girl, introduces Greta to the humors of the Broadway crowd which enters the race tracks and other sporting events. Voine has some exceedingly narrow escapes from the wrath and fists of her "protector's" wife. Others in the cast of the comedy are Nell O'Day, Arthur Jenkins, Vince Barnett, Marjorie Boede, Esther Howard.

"Summer Lightning"
"Summer Lightning," which is now showing at the Central Theatre is a team job in the biggest sense of the word.

Author of the story is that master of humorous writing, P. G. Wodehouse, famous on both sides of the Atlantic for the wit of his novels. It was fitting that Ralph Lynn should be chosen to bring the character of Hugo Carmody to the screen, since the kind of humor typified by the B. & D. star is absolutely Wodehouse in its essence. They both trade in absurdity; both characterize young men whose very faux has amount, in spite of him and not because of him, to master strokes of genius.

"Summer Lightning" introduces Ralph Lynn as Hugo Carmody, secretary to Lord Emsworth. Being in love with Emsworth's ward, Millicent, Hugo conceives the brilliant idea of stealing the old man's prize pig, Empress, and posing as a hero by returning the animal without any serious trouble—but the complications which subsequently ensue from this apparently simple act of knavery are uproariously funny. Suffice it to say that by a series of masterly blunders Hugo successfully achieves his plan, outwits his rivals and marries the girl.

Supporting the cast are Winifred Shuter, Dorothy Boucher, Esmé Percy, Miles Mallett and Horace Hodges.

"Paddy, The Next Best Thing"
Warner Baxter is co-starred with Janet Gaynor in "Paddy, The Next Best Thing," the Fox picture that starts on Saturday at the King's Theatre. This is the first time in two years that the popular stars have been teamed, the last previous occasion being "Daddy Long Legs".

Miss Gaynor, who has just completed "Adorable" with Henry Grant as her starring partner, has the title role in "Paddy," and Baxter will play the part of Lawrence Blanks. Janet's role is said to be in striking contrast with anything she has played. Her dialogue will have a flavour of Irish dialect.
Harry Lachman, who has won critical favour by his first American production, "Face in the Sky," directed and Edwin Burke adapted the play for the screen.
The Eagle and The Hawk
Hollywood—Paramount, in particular—has done itself proud, having taken a story by the author of "Wings," injected the most thrilling air episode, applied it with crisp and effective dialogue, provided it with a windfall of mirth, added a tender and genuinely touching romance and given a complete and authentic picture of the lives of those devil-may-care sky-men who flirt with death in the clouds and are just as adventurous on the ground.
That's what has been done in "The Eagle and The Hawk," the widely heralded film which is opening on Sunday at the Queen's Theatre. The

TRIBUTE TO SOONG.

SIR FREDERICK MAZE GIVES RECEPTION

Shanghai, Nov. 8. A souvenir of admiration and regard was presented to Mr. T. V. Soong by Sir Frederick Maze, Inspector-General of the Chinese Maritime Customs, at a reception held this evening. The presentation was made on behalf of Sir Frederick and the Customs staff. Mr. Soong, in acknowledging the tribute, said that he took pride in looking back over the achievements of the Customs service during his administration as Finance Minister. Revenue had been trebled since the attainment of China's tariff autonomy and the service, during the troublous times of past years, had maintained the high standard of integrity which it had always enjoyed. —Reuter.

OBITUARY

MARSHAL THE VISCOUNT UYEHARA

Tokyo, Nov. 8. Marshal, the Viscount Yusaku Uyebara died to-day from heart disease, at the age of 77.

With Marshal Muto's death on July 27, there are now only two marshals in Japan—the Princes Kanin and Nashimoto. —Reuter.

Uyebara Yusaku was born in 1856 in Hyuga. After a course in England with the British Army, he returned to Japan with the rank of sub-lieutenant. Later he studied military tactics in France and was a staff officer of the 1st Army in the Sino-Japanese War.

Yusaku represented Japan at the coronation of the late Tsar of Russia and after the Great War was one of the Japanese representatives at The Hague Peace Conference.

During the Russo-Japanese War he was Marshal Nozu's Chief of Staff. In 1897 he was raised to the Japanese Peerage. He commanded the 7th Division in 1908 and was Minister for War in 1912-13. The following year he was appointed Chief of the Military Education Board and at the conclusion of the Great War, was raised to the rank of Field Marshal.

From 1918 to 1923, the Viscount was Chief of the General Staff, at the same time serving as a Member of the Board of Marshals and Fleet Admirals.

DRY DAYS END.

PROHIBITION'S DOOM SEALED IN U.S.

New York, Nov. 8. Prohibition is now virtually docketed in the United States, in theory as well as in fact.

Utah to-day voted "wet" and became the thirty-sixth state to repeal the prohibition laws. This proportion of states was necessary on the "wet" card to make repeal possible.

The only step remaining to make the repeal complete is the ratification when the state conventions meet on December 12. Then they will formally accept the 21st Amendment repealing the 18th Amendment and thereafter the sale of liquor and wines will be legal.

Ohio and Pennsylvania also have voted, but North and South Carolina are "dry."

The news that the country had turned its back on prohibition was celebrated throughout America in all-night demonstrations, impromptu parades and mock funerals.

A quarter of a million thrifty New Yorkers hoarse after cheering the first anti-Tammany mayor for twenty-five years, hailed the surprising Utah result and consumed vast quantities of bootleggers' whiskey.

Chicago night clubs staged jamborees, while farther west, Californians, including famous film stars, participated in rejoicings. —Reuter.

EUROPEAN ORDERED TO PAY MONTH'S RENT

A successful claim by Dr. Chau Wal-chung against a European C.N.S. Burns formerly of Li Kwan Avenue, for $80 rent, was made before the Peking Judge, Mr. E. Lindell, at the Supreme Court yesterday.

Mr. F. H. Leachy represented plaintiff, the defendant appearing in person.

Correspondence between the parties was read in which defendant suggested that he had had to leave Li Kwan Avenue on medical grounds. It had been impossible for him to stay there owing to the noise of the people in the building.

Plaintiff gave evidence and said he never gave Burns notice to quit.

In the witness box defendant maintained that he paid his rent in advance, so that he could leave the house at any time.

Giving judgment for plaintiff, His Lordship said that as Burns left without any notice he was liable for the month's rent.

ECONOMIST'S ADVICE.

URGES AMERICA TO GO BACK TO GOLD

New York, Nov. 8.

The noted economist, Professor Kemmerer, suggests that the United States should promptly return to the gold standard and stabilize the dollar at two-thirds of its present parity, thus ending inflation and the peril attached thereto, and restoring business confidence.

He urges the Government to use the U.S. $2,000,000,000 obtainable by such a step towards the liquidation of its indebtedness to the Federal Reserve Bank, which amounts to that sum in Government securities. —Reuter.

UNEMPLOYMENT FUND

Now Solvent and Paying Off Debts

London, Nov. 8.
During the current financial year, the unemployment fund owing to the improved conditions of employment, has accumulated a surplus on insurance account of about £5,250,000.

As this appears to be more than sufficient to provide against winter contingencies, the Minister of Labour has decided to apply half of it towards repayment of borrowings by the Fund which total £150,000,000. Repayment is being made as various parts of the debt fall due.—British Wireless.

STABBING CASE SHANGHAI

U.S. PETTY OFFICER SENTENCED

FOUND MAN WITH WIFE

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Agency, London, 1933. Received November 8, 1933 p.m.)

Shanghai, Nov. 9.
Petty Officer George Danko, of the United States Navy, was sentenced to imprisonment for two years this morning, for committing an assault with a dangerous weapon.

Danko is married to a Russian woman, and stabbed her in a fit of fury after a journey from Tsingtao to Shanghai by railway, via Tsinan and Nanking.

Danko was aboard the U.S.S. Smith-Thompson in Tsingtao, and deserted his ship on September 2, on hearing that his wife was living with another man.

Reaching Shanghai, Danko sobbingly told the Court, he found the two together in an apartment. The man fled, whereupon Danko stabbed the woman surgically.

He said he lost his head entirely.

Danko is a war veteran with an excellent record. He is being sent to McNeill's Island.

One other was sentenced to one year, with a stay of execution for two years.

Over a million letters, including over a thousand written in blood, were received urging leniency.—Reuter.

HECTIC FINAL STAGES

FULL OF ERRORS BY BOTH ELEVENS

DUNKLEY'S COSTLY OVER-KEENNESS

HONGKONG DISMALLY FAILED IN THE INTERPORT MATCH AGAINST MALAYA TO-DAY AFTER THE EARLY BATSMEN HAD PUT THEM WITHIN SIGHT OF VICTORY.

MALAYA WON BY FOURTEEN RUNS.

The end came when Dunkley, with everything depending on him, called the injured Goodwin for an absurdly short run, was signalled back but could not reach his crease.

It was a tragic end to a thrilling match, although it was in tune with Hongkong's methods of trying to score rapidly when time was ample. Ninety-five runs were scored before lunch—excellent going but at a cost of six wickets. Even then there was a fighting chance, but Owen-Hughes got out in being extra-cautious, and a collapse followed.

BRIGHT BATTING IN MORNING

The game was resumed at 11.05 a.m. today in a hot sun. The pitch seemed to have completely recovered, but there were patches here and there to mark the recent soaking it had gone through. Trouble befell Hongkong in the very first over of the day. The pitch definitely suited Willis's express, and after conceding two runs to Duckitt, he completely beat the batsman with a ball that took the off stump. The score-board read 7-1-2.

FINCHER AND PEARCE.

Gill bowled from the Supreme Court end, and off his fifth delivery, Fincher hit him to the leg boundary. Apart from this ball, a full toss, Gill kept a good length. Willis started with three slips but after Pearce had swept him to leg for a single, he took off one and put him to square leg.

Fincher had a "life" in Gill's second over when he tried to drive the Sikh, who just failed to hold a red-hot return.

Willis was bowling very fast, but inclined to send them down on the leg side, and both batsmen found it easy to play him. They scored singles in turn.

PEARCE QUIET.

Fincher reached double figures from a single off Willis, whom he was playing very confidently.

Although not troubled by the bowlers, Pearce refused to take any risks. He was very cautious to Gill who sent down a maiden.

to him. Off Willis, however, he pulled a short one to the Chater Road end for a four.

Twenty appeared after 26 minutes play.

Willis was very erratic. He was sending them down fast, but could not find a length, and Fincher sent one of his full tosses hard to the boundary.

At 34, Jonkass took over from Gill, and both Fincher and Pearce took two off his first over, the latter reaching 10 in 22 minutes.

FORTY FOR ONE.

Hamilton made a double change by putting on Speldewinde for Willis. Pearce hit him hard to cover where Alvis folded it well but returned the ball over the wicket-keeper's head and it rolled to the boundary to give the batsman a four.

Speldewinde met with success in his second over. Fincher drove it hard back to the bowler but he failed to hold it.

Off his next delivery, Fincher repeated the stroke but this time it was a catch.

Of the total of 42, Fincher had contributed exactly half. He had batted for 44 minutes for his runs, and appeared to be taking more chances than usual, 42-2-21.

Joining Pearce, Williams settled down quickly and made four runs in as many minutes.

PEARCE OUT.

In an attempt to square cut Jonkass, Pearce offered a catch to Croome, and it was accepted 48-3-18.

The 50 was hoisted after exactly an hour's play. Garthwaite was playing a care.—(Continued on Page 5.)

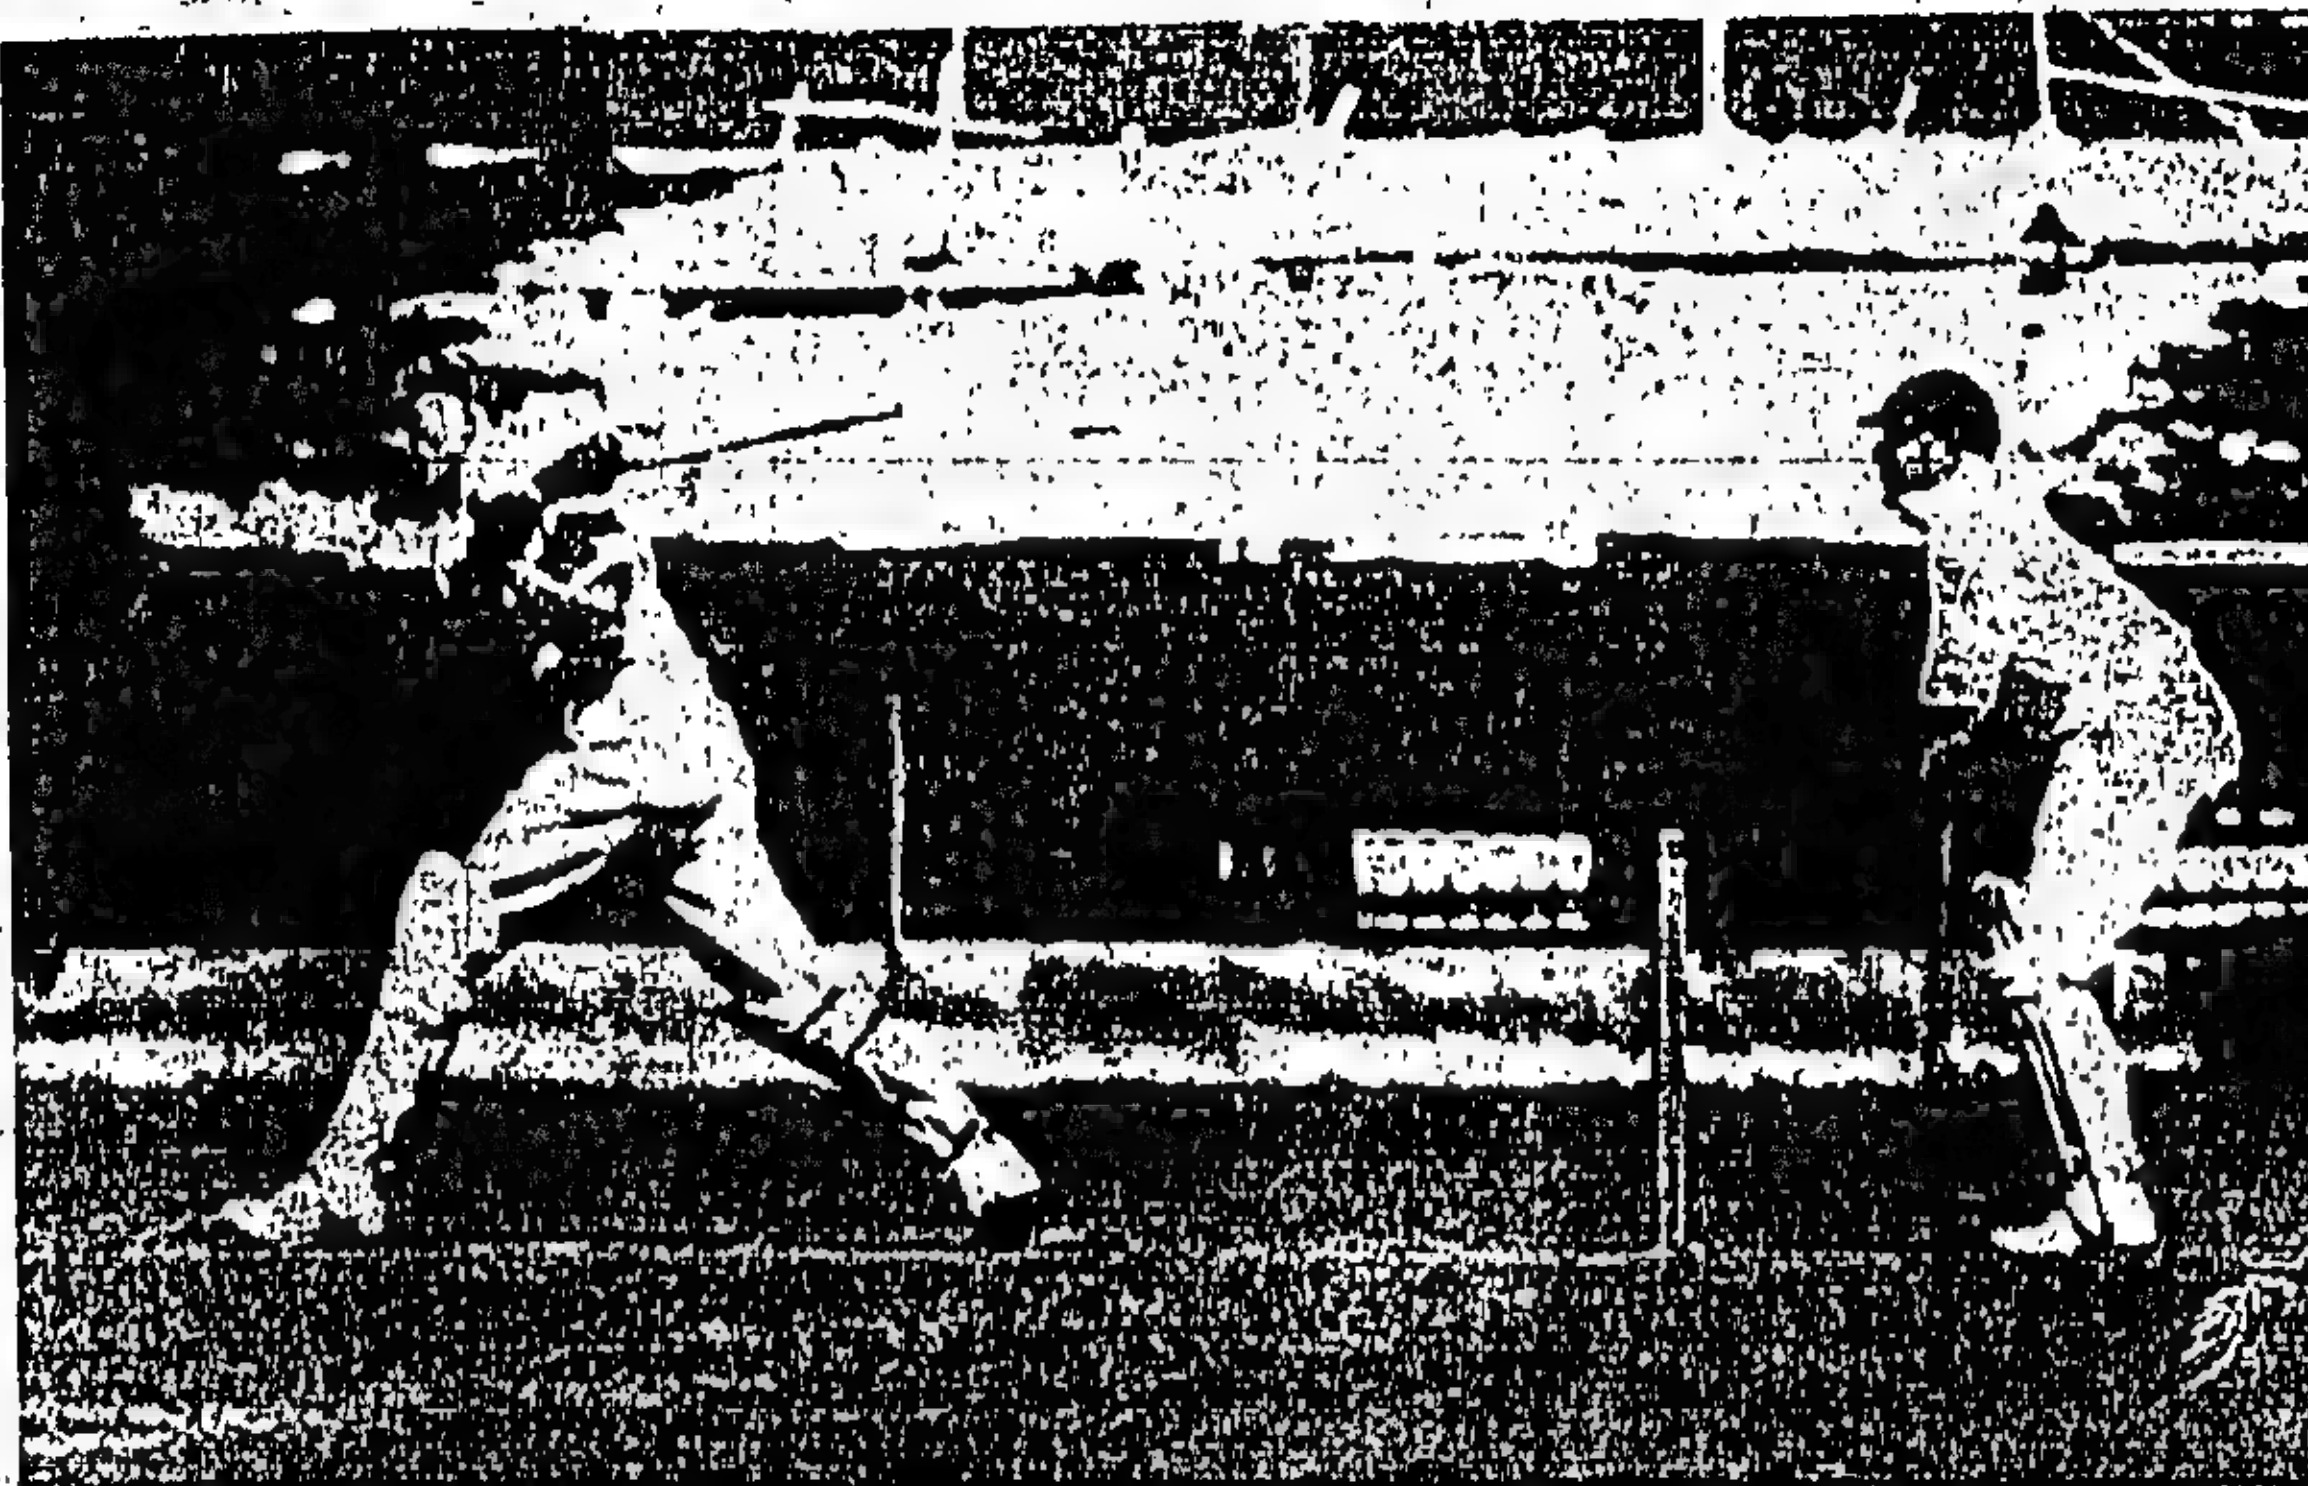

HONGKONG XI VERSUS SHANGHAI

Selection Committee Meet

Immediately after the Interport game to-day, the Hongkong Selection Committee, Messrs. H. R. B. Hancock, T. E. Pearce, A. W. Hayward and H. Owen-Hughes, had a consultation at the Hongkong C.C., the subject being the composition of the Colony XI against Shanghai on Saturday.

Seen by a Telegraph representative Owen-Hughes said there would definitely be some changes in the Hongkong team, but could not say what they were.

The full team will probably be announced to-morrow.

Owen Hughes giving the ball a hard crack in a characteristic innings during yesterday's Interport encounter.

FERRY PIER SCANDAL

REPAIR WORK AT NIGHT

AFTER ABOUT SIX MONTHS

A notification in last week's Government Gazette announced an alteration to the usual hours of the vehicular ferry service for the three days ending to-morrow.

The notification was couched in the most matter-of-fact terms, leaving it to be deduced as a curtailment of the service, and not disclosing reasons.

The explanation came in the bustle and activity begun late last night after the departure of the last ferry from the new and expensive Hongkong pier, and continued to nearly 6 o'clock this morning.

A clang-of-hammer-on-steel-and-wood, workmen in the light of one lamp, performing mysterious rites with saws and rivets, and a pull of smoke pierced by flying sparks, hanging over the spot like a pyrotechnic display—all these indicated that there was something conspicuously wrong with the new vehicular pier—hitherto the pride of P. W. B. achievement.

DANGEROUSLY WEAK.

The fact of the matter is that the new vehicular ferry pier, despite its cost, has been found to be dangerously weak, entirely unsuited for the service expected of it, liable to sudden destruction, and liable also to cost the public treasury many more lakhs of dollars before the earlier mistakes in its construction can, if ever, be rectified.

It is now six months since the pier was opened with a fanfare of trumpets for the vehicular service in connexion with the Hongkong and Yau-mat Ferry Company. Government which had expended the best portion of two million dollars on the scheme, wedded it to the Company for ten years, and woe it has turned out to be.

TIDE DANGER.

At every bump, the pier was badly shaken. Piles reduced to half of their originally designed thickness, for the sake of economy, so one is told, in places, and the mass of concrete not calculated to stand the strain of an uncalculated deadweight, was in danger of being swept away by current and tide—another factor not given export consideration in the minds of the designers. The surface of the pier took on the inconsistency of unknocked flour-lumpy in parts and sinking where the piles have given way. At every bump exerted as the stout vehicular ferry-boat comes alongside, one trembles for its safety.

As an unofficial Legislative Councillor said in the recent Budget debate, "It is a matter for regret that the already considerable expenditure on the vehicular ferry pier is to be increased by a lakh or more; but I trust that the advice of the Naval Dockyard expert will put things right."

PRINCESS ROYAL

Condition Reported Satisfactory

London, Nov. 8.
A bulletin issued regarding the Princess Royal, who yesterday underwent an operation for appendicitis, states that her condition this morning is satisfactory.—British Wireless.

CUBA REBELLION

STATE OF WAR DECLARED

HEAVY HAVANA CASUALTIES

Havana, Nov. 8.

The expected upheaval in Cuba has come. President Grau San Martin has declared a state of war throughout the country.

Grave disturbances occurred in Havana, where the populace seem to be in open rebellion.

Fighting went on throughout the day at different points.

The casualty list in the capital alone is stated to be not less than 32 killed and a hundred wounded. Widespread anti-Government movements are reported from other parts of the island.—Reuter.

FORTS SHELLED.

Later.

Fighting is now continuing, both on land and sea.

Gunboats shelled three rebel forts in Havana, although fortunately there is much more show of fight than damage.

The casualties are now estimated at least fifty killed and 125 wounded.—Reuter.

HONGKONG-MANILA AIR SERVICE

Franchise Request Shelved

Manila, Nov. 8.

It is reported that the Legislature has shelved Pan-American Airways request for a twenty-five year franchise in connexion with the proposed Hongkong-Manila air mail and passenger service.—Reuter.

SKIPTON ELECTION

CONSERVATIVES RETAIN SEAT

BY A REDUCED MAJORITY

London, Nov. 8.

The result of the Skipton by-election, caused by the death of Mr. E. R. Bird, was declared to-night as follows:

G. Richards (Con.)	18,136
J. Davies (Labour)	14,167
R. Denby (Lib.)	9,219
J. Rushton (Com.)	704

The Communist candidate forfeits his deposit.

Mr. Richards' majority of roughly 4,000 compares with a victory by 14,980 votes for the late Mr. Bird in the 1931 General Election, in a straight fight with Mr. Davies.

The Labour vote is up by 1,103, and the Conservative down by nearly 10,000, this being largely accounted for by the fact that many Liberals voted for the National Conservatives at Skipton in 1931.—British Wireless.

CONTROL OF LIQUOR

AMERICA'S NEW PROBLEM

Washington, Nov. 8.
The Farm Administration has created a beverage section for the control of the beer and liquor industries through marketing agreements and possibly the social aspects of distribution.

The control of the liquor problem by this special organisation will hold good until Congress has enacted suitable legislation.—Reuter.

NEW PLAN FOR WORKLESS

INSURANCE ACTS TO BE AMENDED

London, Nov. 8.

A Government bill to amend the Unemployment Insurance Acts, and to make further provision for the training and assistance of unemployed who are capable of, and available for, work was introduced in the House of Commons. The Bill will not be proceeded with this session which ends on November 17, when House will be prorogued.

The Bill will be reintroduced in new session which the King will open on November 24.—British Wireless.

MYSTERY OF A KEY

COURT-MARTIAL EVIDENCE

PTE. DERHAM'S STORIES

EXAMINATION PAPERS CASE

A duplicate key to a box containing secret papers formed the subject of a close inquiry during to-day's hearing of the court-martial of Corporals Doughty and Brealey, of the Lincolnshires, and Private McArdell, of the South Wales Borderers.

A keysmith said the key had been made from a mould and was more than a year old.

The court-martial concerns allegations that examination papers were disclosed to instructors, with the result that their candidates in the Second Class Certificate examination turned in phenomenally good papers.

Accused are charged under the Official Secrets Act.

When the Court re-opened this morning Pte. Derham was subjected to further cross-examination by Mr. Strellett. He said he was told nothing about secrecy when he took over his duties in the Education Office nor was he asked to sign any document with regard to secrecy.

When he handed the $100 to Pte. McArdell he knew he was going to get back $50 as his share. No arrangement had been made but he expected $50. No discussion took place on this subject.

CHANGE OF STORY.

In answer to Lieut. Hope, witness said he obtained the information which assisted him in his 2nd Class Certificate of Education examination from L/Cpl. Ellis. He took his examination about November 1931. Pte. McArdell would not have been aware of what he was sending to Shamshulpo as he was in another office.

In answer to another question witness said: "I realise that the statement made by me is quite different to the one I gave at the summary of evidence. I cannot say why I changed my story from time to time."

Lieut. Hope: Do you expect the Court to believe your present story?—Witness: Yes.

Witness admitted that he had recently been convicted of telling a falsehood to a garrison policeman.

TYPING OF PAPERS.

Witness Officer P. H. Senior, A.R.C., said McArdell typed out the papers for the 2nd Class Certificate of Education on August 14. He typed the Mathematics, Army and Empire and Essay papers. He was instructed to do the papers in duplicate. Witness took the originals which he was to copy from the tin box in his office of which he held the key. They had been there for some months. McArdell typed the papers in the Officer's Library which witness used as an office. It was at McArdell's request that they were typed in witness's office because he said there were too many people in "G" Office. Sgt. Halford and Sgt. Clutton were being typed by McArdell. Witness was not certain whether he was in the office the whole time the papers were being typed. The two sergeants were not in the office when McArdell handed the papers to witness.

NO CHECK.

Witness added that he was in the room with McArdell the whole time after the other N.C.O.s had gone home. He was not watching McArdell but was carrying on with his own work. He did not check the papers which McArdell handed.—(Continued on Page 11.)

SERRAVALLO'S TONIC

(BARK AND IRON TONIC)

Dr. A. RIVAI

Tanah Abang West 34,

Batavia, Centrum, Java. Says "A GOOD TONIC NEEDS NO FURTHER PRAISES".

This saying of the Dutch is applicable to "Serravallo's Tonic". "Serravallo's Tonic" is a combination of Bark and Iron and Wine. When I was in Poland, Germany, Switzerland and Spain, many doctors there highly recommended and prescribed "Serravallo's Tonic" to their patients. All the doctors whom I know highly praised it. "Serravallo's Tonic" is a sure remedy for the following ailments:

Poor Blood, Nervousness,
Loss of Appetite, Weak Nerves.

After Influenza and Malaria.

Among all the medicines for the strengthening of the body, "Serravallo's Tonic" is the best. Whoever lives in a country where malaria is prevalent, the surest means to prevent this disease is to drink "Serravallo's Tonic". Women after child-birth should take "Serravallo's Tonic" to gain strength quickly and be healthy. Children may drink "Serravallo's Tonic".

Nurses For Children Must Be Selected Very Carefully

By Olive Roberts Burton

There are good and bad points to the nursemaid system in families. Let us weigh them against each other.

To begin with, taking care of a family of children to-day is rather a job. It isn't as it used to be when we were a more or less rural people and surroundings were safe and clean.

It is always harder to care for children in cities than in the country. It is especially hard in the industrial city. Add to that our new ideas of prophylaxis and prevention and you have a real business on your hands to do all the things expected of the modern parent.

Then too, I think a mother not only is entitled to a certain share in the good things of life, but also that she is a better mother for her experiences if she uses judgment.

Therefore if one can afford it, why not have someone to help with the children? I see no real argument against it.

Much Depends on Nurse

Two words here I must emphasize. "Someone" and "help." The entire matter hinges on them. This "someone" should not be anyone. There are nursemaids to-day taking care of children that are no more fitted for the work than I am for making a watch.

To keep the children clean, well fed, exercised, and regular in their hours is merely the frame-work of real nursing. This is why the word "help" is important. The other half of caring for children is the most important. It consists of the invisible things, the moulding of character, the cultivating of happiness and self reliance without sacrificing discipline. This, I think

WHAT more fitting a costume for the dance than this be-bowed model of dotted black velvet? It is designed in six sizes: 14, 16, 18 and 20 (with corresponding bust measures of 33½, 35, 36½ and 38), and 40 and 42 bust. Size 18 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material. The bows, if made of ribbon, require 1¼ yards.

is the mother's part. It must always be her part.

A nurse is not often versed in the profession of character building. A few are, but not many. Even if the mother is with her children a great part of the time, as she should be, it must be remembered that her influence can be cancelled very quickly by another person who uses methods exactly the opposite to her own.

It so happens, of course, that a mother may be wrong and a nurse right. We occasionally see the kindly, intelligent nurse who is an infinitely better parent than the real one. The child with such a nurse is fortunate.

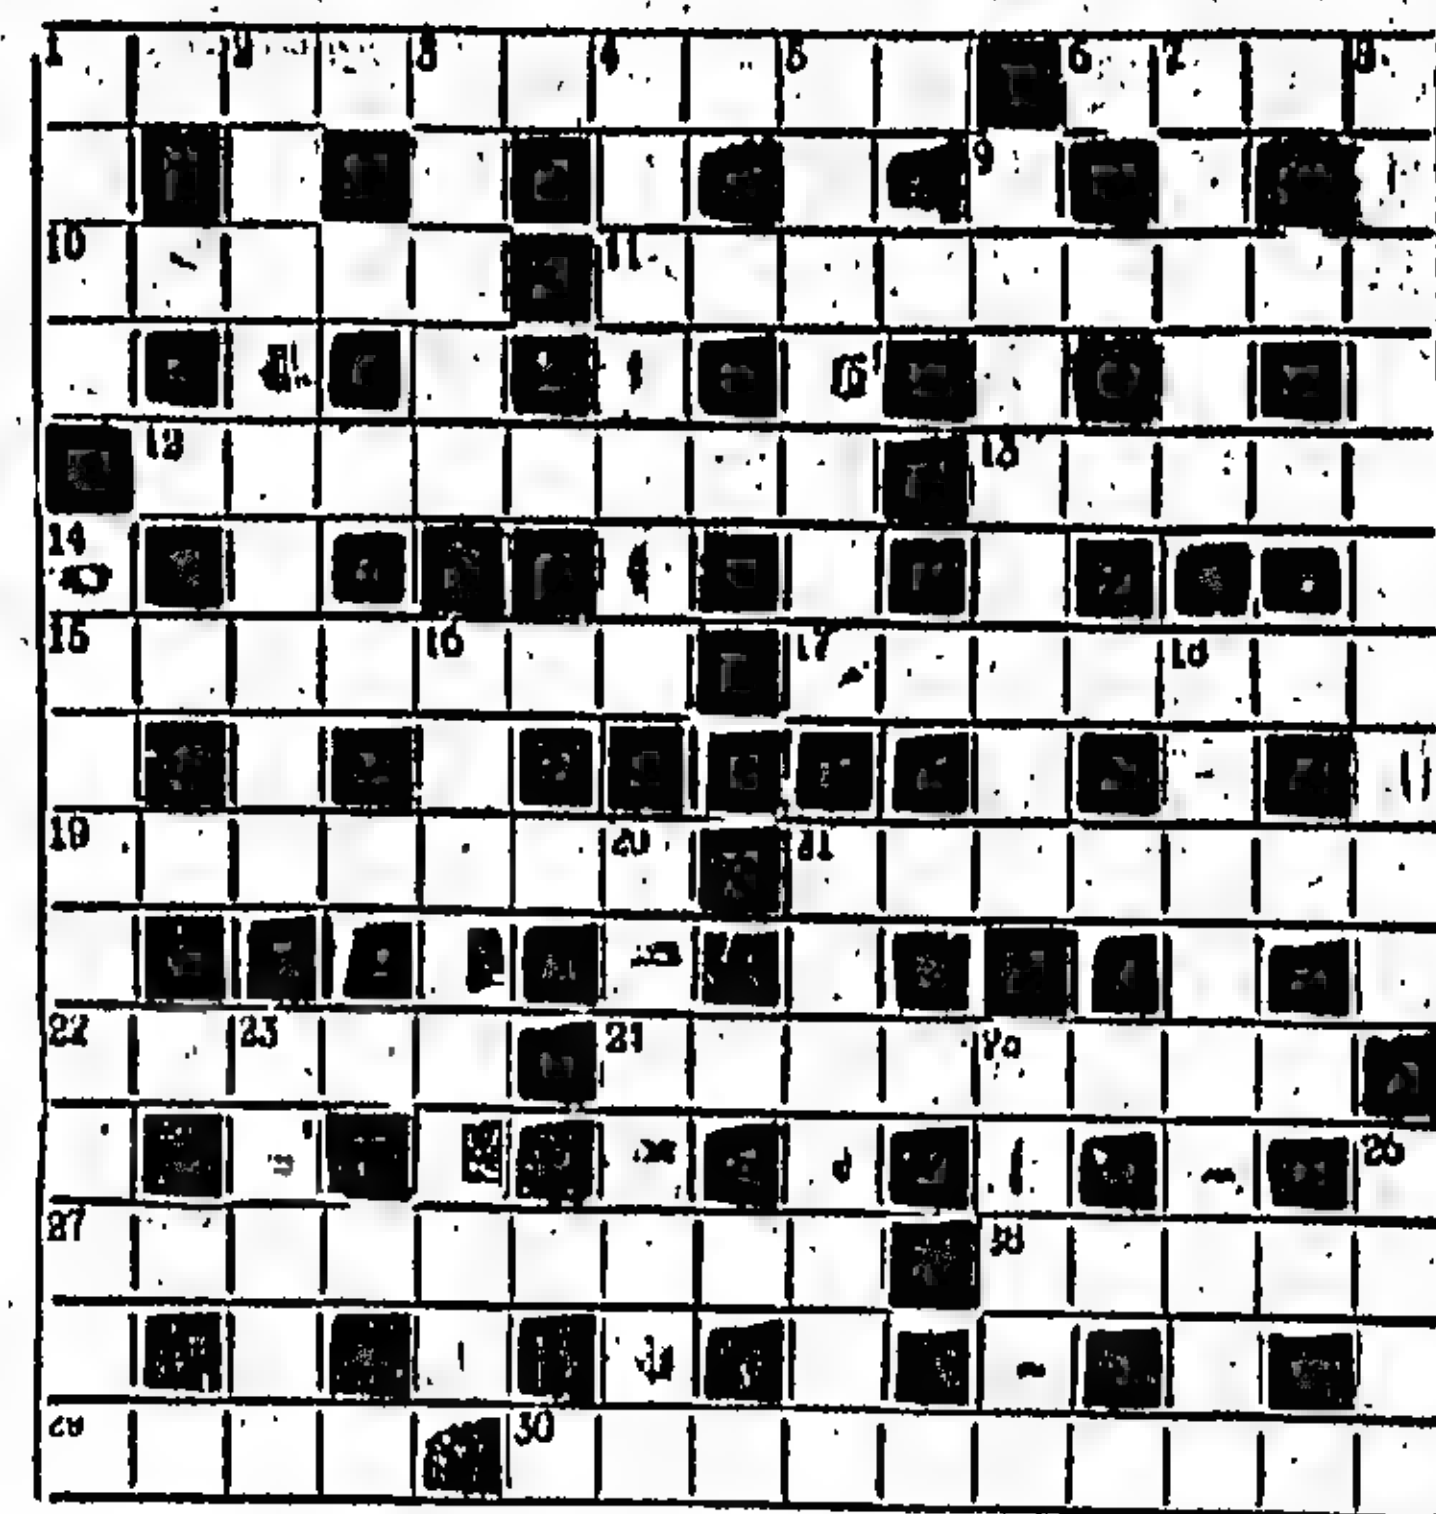

They May Abuse Nurses... Children humoured by parents to the point of ruination can make a nurse's life miserable. I wouldn't change places with some I know for all the money on earth.

But taking it for granted that the mother is a sensible person, I suggest that first of all she hire a nurse of intelligence and sympathy, but with a mature outlook and enough force of character to establish confidence in her charges. Then for her to co-operate with the nurse, agreeing on a policy, just as parents must agree. And to give a goodly part of her own time to the children and quickly set right any trouble between children and nurse.

We cannot expect nurses to be professional psychologists, but with a little trouble a mistress can explain fundamentals as she goes along. Both must pull together, not apart. This is where most of the trouble lies, I am sure.

Home Study Aids. A child who goes to school should have a desk and, better yet, a whole room of his own. It increases his desire to do his home work conscientiously. Make sure that there is a good reading lamp on the little student's table and a chair which encourages him to sit up straight while he studies.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

A Summer Mystery BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

CHAPTER XXI

"On the Road Back."

"Do you know, Mr. Sefton, I believe we're getting somewhere," observed Inspector Root, after a thoughtful pause, during which the minds of both men were busy on new material. "We can build a bit more into our picture. Half-an-hour ago I learned definitely that a stranger was talking earnestly with Mr. Fyne."

"May I ask how you got that information?" interposed Leonard. "Certainly. This is a queer business, and I've had to move warily. I've felt like you about it—that one might ask too many questions up at the hotel. But I did get on the track of all the guests who left on the day Mr. Fyne disappeared, hoping they might be able to tell me something. Well, one of 'em has told me something. On his way to the station, he passed Mr. Fyne and this stranger in a little wood by the roadside. He says that Mr. Fyne was looking very startled, and the stranger was talking excitedly."

"Well done," said Leonard, approvingly. "I admit, it wasn't so bad," replied the inspector. "But of what use would the information have been but for your own information, Mr. Sefton? The two things fit like a glove. Not only have you located my man—who might never have been located—but you've located him here! We can stop chasing shadows, and chase substance. It's pretty obvious to me that this wild fellow of ours will know where Mr. Fyne went to that night—and why—or that they went together, for the same reason. Now, if they went together, we've only got to lay our hands on Mr. Fyne's companion to reach the bottom of the whole Mermald mystery."

"You think, then, that he will also be able to solve the mystery of the murdered man?"

"Don't you?"

Leonard shook his head doubtfully. "I may be wrong, inspector, but frankly I don't. Again I'm only giving you an impression—no I did about the colour of the beard—but it's a pretty strong impression. I think our wild man was as astonished to find the body on the boat as we were. And he was certainly more disturbed."

"Confound it, that's true," muttered Root. "This is quite the queerest case I've been on. You can't find a straight current anywhere. It's all cross currents."

"I believe Mr. Griddle knows something about the wild man,"

continued Leonard, "for he questioned me rather closely about him—only, at that time, I didn't have my board brainwave. But the Luigi business seems to be another cross-current."

"Ah, and I've got something to tell you about that," interrupted the inspector. "You know that bicycle that disappeared from the shed at the hotel?"

"Yes."

"Well, we've got it. Yes, I'm afraid Luigi will have a pretty serious reckoning one day. We mustn't strike too soon, however, or we might lose the bagful."

"Did the bicycle tell you anything?" asked Leonard, curiously. "Oh, quite a nice little amount! Luigi's a bit of a fool. He dropped the bicycle into a pond, and I'll say that he was wise enough to find the deep end. But we've fished the bicycle out since."

"And found?"

"That neither of the brakes work, and both show symptoms of having been tampered with. There are also other marks on the frame which suggest fruitless attempts to weaken it by sawing. Nothing definite, you understand."

"But enough to convince you that Luigi meant his predecessor Anderson to have an accident," interposed Leonard, "so that he could step into his shoes?"

"You've got it," nodded Root. "You've got it exactly. Luigi will be lucky if he escapes hanging. It's possible he's got more than one victim on his conscience, eh?"

"If you mean the man who was lying at the foot of the gap, I don't agree," replied Leonard. "Luigi didn't kill him. Nor, as I've said, did I think our wild man had anything to do with it. It was the seaman who undertook that little business—the seaman whose coat lacks that little gold button I've shown you, and that bit of blue serge."

"God, what a maze!" exclaimed Root, and for a moment he looked almost desperate. Then his teeth unknocked together, and he added, grimly, "And that seaman chap can't be far off, either! Well, we must spread our net. I wish I had a few more men, though. I'll have to get through and ask for further supplies."

"I'm one more, if you want me," suggested Leonard. "Thanks—of course, I want you," answered the other. "But it'll be an all night job, you know."

"Well, if it's too soon to get up, it's also too late to go to bed, so why worry?" smiled Leonard. "I'm same, anyway. And Mr. Truelove, I know, will do anything he can. At present he's guarding the castle."

"Perhaps he'd better go on guarding the castle," mused the inspector. "Well, use your own discretion. I think you'd better get back to the hotel now, anyway, and see that everything's all quiet there, and I'll send a man after you. Maybe I'll come along myself."

"Good," nodded Leonard, rising. "What's your plan?"

"A very simple and obvious one. I've got to get through to other stations at once, to warn them of the position. Then I'll spread my men around and search the district for our interesting friends. Since we're looking for three people—including Mr. Fyne—we surely ought to have the luck to find one of 'em. And then, of course, there's that wreck. I'll have to go out to that. I could use two or three men to-night, if I only had them."

On the point of leaving, Leonard asked:

"I suppose you haven't a spare bicycle? It's a long walk!"

"Take mine," answered the inspector, readily. "It's in the hall."

"But won't you need it?"

"No. One of my pals runs the bicycle shop next door, and I have a key and permission to use it. Also, the State has provided me with a car. And now you'd better hurry, sir, or you'll find someone at the hotel before you."

A minute later, Leonard was on his way back to Craverley Point. Matters were moving faster than he had anticipated, and his mind was full of conjectures. He wondered whether any, or all, of the three people for whom a search was about to be organised would be found before morning, and what explanations they would offer—if, he thought somewhat morbidly, they were in a condition to offer explanations. The picture was still dark as were the lanes he cycled through, but light was filtering towards it from strange sources.

Half-a-mile from the hotel, as the church clock struck four, a shape grew out of the blackness ahead of him and entered the arena of his lamp's light. He pulled up sharply, and jumped off his machine with an exclamation.

"Miss Fyne!" he cried. "What's happened?"

"I'm disobeying orders," she replied, and there was relief in her tone. "I couldn't sleep."

"Yes, but why are you out here?" he asked.

"Why are you?" she parried. "I've been to the police-station. You didn't tell me." There was a hint of reproach in her voice.

"That was only because I didn't want you to worry more than was necessary," he answered quickly. "I wanted you to go straight to bed and to forget things were happening for a few hours."

"I guessed that was the reason," Mr. Sefton, when I saw you slipping out of the hotel."

"You saw me?" he exclaimed. "Well, that's humiliating! I thought I slipped out so quietly!"

"You did."

"Then all I can say, Miss Fyne, is that you must have been watching for me to go. Were you?"

"No."

"I'm anxious for you—naturally," she responded, after a little hesitation. "You're taking such risks."

"Nonsense! A walk to a police-station isn't a big risk."

"Then it's just as big a risk to come chasing people who are walking to police-station," he said, reprovingly.

She smiled while she admitted his point.

"Perhaps," she returned. "But I've only come just a little of the way. Mr. Sefton, now that you've notified the police, I don't want you to go on taking risks for me, please."

"I can't stop now. I'm in the middle of things, and have got to see them through."

"Please," she repeated. "If anything should happen to you—I'd feel so wretchedly responsible."

"Nothing's going to happen to me. And, anyway, there'd be no need for you to feel responsible at all. This was bound to happen."

"Bound to happen? I don't understand." She frowned. "Are you a fatalist?"

"What I meant was," he explained, "you are not the only reason why I am doing all this."

The frown grew, and took on a new quality.

"I see," she said.

"You don't see," he retorted. "Because if the other reason did not exist—well, I should be doing it just the same. Which is another way of saying, Miss Fyne, that you are my first thought in this affair, but there'd be another reason to drive me on even if you weren't."

"It's nice of you to put it like that," she answered, now frowning no more. "Will you be near still and tell me what that other reason is? You've hinted at it before, you know. Was it the other reason," she added, suddenly, "that brought you here?"

He nodded.

"So you see, Miss Fyne, you've no need to worry about personal responsibility in the matter. You've not brought these shadows into my life. On the contrary, you've brought—"

He stopped abruptly, and they spoke no more until they reached the entrance to the hotel. Possibly they thought a good deal, however. Possibly, also, they might have given some expression to their thoughts before entering the grounds had not a new matter abruptly entered them. A figure moved on the other side of the hedge.

The figure was moving stealthily, and they drew aside instinctively as it approached the gate that led to the lane. The gate softly opened, and the figure emerged, peering hard at the ground as it did so. Its scrutiny was assisted by a small spotlight.

"Jim!" exclaimed Leonard, as he recognised the figure by its attitude and diminutive size.

"Ol!" yelled Jim, jumping.

"What are you doing?"

Jim gulped, and regained his composure.

"Trackin' 'im," said Jim.

"Him? Whom?"

"Loopy, 'E's gorn. But I'm trackin' 'im."

And, as though fearing that his laudable intentions might be thwarted if he stayed, he suddenly darted away and was swallowed up by the darkness.

"Well, let him go," muttered Leonard, grimly. "The hares are becoming so numerous, we want all the hounds we can muster."

They crossed the lawn, and another figure emerged from the shadows.

"Who's that?" called Leonard, sharply.

"Friend," came the reply.

"Night-watchman."

Leonard wiped his brow.

"Who aren't you inside, Truelove?" he asked.

"As I'm outside," returned Napoleon, "I'm lookin' for a slippery old man called Griddle."

YEAST-VITE

Brand Tonic Tablets

The great value of "Yeast-Vite" as an ALL ROUND remedy—even for those whose health is completely broken down—is fully evidenced by the remarkable letter below. Gentlemen,—I feel I must write my thanks to you. I had until recently the following troubles:—
(1) Severe Headaches.
(2) Indigestion, Pains, Stomach-aches.
(3) Bad Sleep.
(4) Bad Nerves.

I have now taken three bottles of your "Yeast-Vite" Tablets and the result is wonderful.
(1) No more throbbing headaches.
(2) Indigestion, thank goodness, has gone, and the terrible pains.
(3) Sleep more refreshing and sound.
(4) Nerves are sound, and I walk with a care-free step.

I am writing this in honest thankfulness for restored health. I still have a few "Yeast-Vite" Tablets, and in our firm if any of my fellow employees are feeling below par, or if the lady-nurses have a headache, I give them "Yeast-Vite" and am only too glad to relieve their suffering. Yours sincerely and gratefully, F. L. East Ham.

To YOU, who perhaps have suffered for so long that you have despaired of ever being well again, the above letter must seem extraordinary. Yet IVE are constantly receiving similar tributes KNOW that "Yeast-Vite" is REGULARLY performing such amazing Health Wonders. Why therefore continue to suffer? If you cannot get Yeast-Vite from your usual Chemist—and nearly all in Hong Kong stock it—write to or call on

A successful claim by Dr. Chau Wah-chung against a European C.N.S. Burns formerly of Li Kwan Avenue, for $60 rent, was made before the Pui-nan Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, at the Supreme Court yesterday.

Mr. F. H. Looby represented plaintiff, the defendant appearing in person.

Correspondence between the parties was read in which the defendant suggested that he had had to leave Li Kwan Avenue on medical grounds. It had been impossible for him to stay there owing to the noise of the people in the building.

Plaintiff gave evidence and said he never gave Burns notice to quit.

In the witness box defendant maintained that he paid his rent in advance, so that he could leave the house at any time.

Giving judgment for plaintiff, His Lordship said that as Burns left without any notice he was liable for the month's rent.

NADIR KHAN

The tragic death of Nadir Khan, King of Afghanistan, is as disturbing to New Delhi as it is to Kabul. Nadir Khan was a bulwark of stability on India's most difficult frontier and the events following his assassination will be watched with keenest anxiety. His four years of kingship were marked by increasing friendship with Britain after an era of dispute, and internally Afghanistan made rapid progress as he did not make the mistake of Amanullah of trying to force his countrymen to adopt new ideas by the mere issue of sensational edicts. Rather, he endeavoured to ensure the internal peace of his kingdom. He was what every Afghan ruler to be successful must be, a man of strong character. He returned to Afghanistan in 1929 to save the maladministration that followed the seizure of supreme power by the brigand chief who was responsible for Amanullah's downfall. Nadir Khan started his campaign as the loyal henchman of Amanullah, while having no illusions about Amanullah's unpopularity with the conservative elements of a backward country which the late King had so rashly attempted to modernise without taking into account the inevitable revolt of the mullahs. Nadir Khan held the position of Commander-in-Chief of the Afghan armies at the time when Habibullah Khan was somewhat mysteriously murdered in 1919. There were many at the time who accused him of being directly responsible for Habibullah's murder, and the troops in Jellalabad actually arrested him, and kept him in custody pending Amanullah's decision about his fate. Amanullah eventually decided to supersede Nadir Khan in his position as Commander-in-Chief, and had him removed to Khost. When, a month or two later, Amanullah foolishly decided upon war with India, he could not do without the services of his tried general. This war was a disastrous one for Afghanistan, and Nadir Khan was the only Afghan leader who displayed any enterprise. Up to this time Nadir Khan had been anything but friendly towards Britain. With most of his fellow-countrymen, he entertained a strong suspicion of the Government of India's frontier policy, and during the Great War he was generally credited with having distinct leanings towards an open alliance with Germany and Turkey. His experiences, however, in the Afghan War of 1919, taught him considerable respect for British arms, and his subsequent visit to Europe quite cured him of his anti-British tendencies. His death will be deeply deplored.

NOTES OF THE DAY

CUNARD MERGER

With arrangements for the merger of the Cunard and White Star lines practically complete, we may expect soon to learn that work has been resumed on the great Cunarder now lying unfinished on the Clyde. For the combine is not entirely inspired by common interests. The Cunard desired Government assistance in the building of their new mammoth ship and the opportunity was seized to obtain in return some rationalisation of the shipping industry and the elimination of competition between the two principal Transatlantic companies. Two birds were thus killed with one stone; the Government makes a valuable contribution to the temporary alleviation of unemployment in Glasgow and at the same time asserts in a new form the closer governmental control being exercised over industry and commerce.

ECONOMIC POLICY

Negotiations between the White Star and Cunard were long drawn out. It was not a question of the amour propre of two great rivals, each reluctant to sink its individuality, although the arrangement for the preservation of both names indicates that tradition was not entirely out of the minds of the directors. The real issue that had to be overcome concerned policy. The White Star has always been a believer in small ships, in the 20,000 ton category, the Cunard in the super-liner. In days of depression such as these the White Star probably had the better of the argument; most giant ships are running at a loss to-day. In normal times, however, it is essential that British shipping prestige be maintained. If Britain does not provide the big ships, however, luxuriously fitted and speedy, the smaller craft, travellers will simply be attracted to the German, French and Italian crack liners. Backed by the unfinished hulk on the Clyde and Government influence on the side of completion, the Cunard people seem to have gained the day; probably to the final benefit of the shareholders of both concerns.

OPIUM LOOPHOLE

The importance of the meanings of words, some of which have a variety of shades, is again emphasised by the result of the appeal of the Crown against Mr. Butters' interpretation of the Opium Ordinance. The Crown endeavoured to stretch the scope of the word "occupier" to mean householder or principal tenant, but the Appeal Judges would have none of it and the whole object of the recent amendments to the Ordinance is clearly defeated. There is no doubt that it was the intention of the Legislature to cover the situation which existed in the prosecution that came under review; equally there is no doubt that the new sub-section was not so constructed as to accomplish the intention. A loophole was left and of course the lawyers found it. It merely shows the extreme care essential in the employment of words. Half Britain's misunderstandings with the United States, for instance, would not have arisen but for slightly different shades of meaning which are applied on opposite sides of the Atlantic to certain words.

WAR DEBTS

Comments by the Middle West on the war debt situation have revealed the seriousness of the word interpretation difficulty on more than one occasion. Speeches by British statesmen addressed primarily to the Middle West have misfired because frank explanations of transfer problems have been read as warnings of repudiation. It might eventually come to that; though the time is not yet by a long way, and both the United States and Britain will undoubtedly strain every effort to avert such a possibility. Certain it is that Britain will never resume payments on the old scale; not because she is unwilling to meet her obligations, but because such a resumption would be essentially destructive of financial stability in both countries. The trouble is to get the bulk of the American people to appreciate the technical side of the problem. They have been told so long that revision or cancellation would mean settling the burden upon the American taxpayer that they almost regard the debts as owing to the community at large. And to attempt to explain to an Iowa farmer the difference between the internal payments of a government, on armaments, for instance, and external payments, would be as futile as suggesting a close season for road-trenching in Hong-kong.

SAVE OUR SHIPS!

By Sir ABE BAILEY, Kt., K.C.M.G.

BRITISH shipping is fighting for its life.

I believe that only the Empire, acting as a single whole, can save it. That is why I am urging an early Imperial Conference to consider the ways and means of instituting a common Empire shipping policy and nothing else.

This question has been brought by the action of the South African Government in granting a subsidy of £50,000 a year to the Italian lines with the idea of retaining and increasing its meat trade with Italy.

I have denounced that action, and I mean to go on denouncing it, as fatal to that co-operation between all the units in the British Commonwealth of nations which is essential to their prosperity.

British shipping takes first place in our national, our international, and our Imperial services and interests. The very existence of the Empire depends more on shipping than on anything else.

Before the war British ships carried about 62 per cent. of the world's seaborne trade.

To-day they carry hardly more than 40 per cent.

Since 1914 such countries as Sweden, Holland, France, Spain, Denmark and Greece have doubled or very nearly doubled their seagoing tonnage. Italy and Norway have more than doubled theirs. Japan shows a still greater increase, and the United States has, on paper, a Mercantile Marine five times as great as before the war.

Britain, on the other hand, has some 300,000 tons less than in 1914.

On all oceans and on nearly all routes British shipping has now to meet the competition of heavily subsidised foreign vessels. These vessels will never pay their way on an economic basis. They were built and are being operated at the taxpayers' expense for the sake of "prestige" and to foster home industries.

The subsidy is the submarine of commerce. State-aided ships, like "dumped goods," disrupt the market and make ordinary commercial operations unprofitable.

Foreign nations are spending some £30,000,000 a year on subsidising the building or the running of these "pirate" vessels. Meanwhile, our giant Cunarder remains idle on the stocks and threatens to become the Waterloo Bridge of the shipping world.

The State-aided foreigner is cutting with deadly destructiveness into British shipping, not only on the main routes but also in the inter-Imperial carrying trade.

Within the last few days Italian vessels have been chartered to load grain from Australia to Europe at totally uncommercial rates with which British owners cannot even pretend to compete.

Another Italian ship not long ago completed a round voyage entirely within the British Empire. Her tour of 13,000 miles earned her a gratuity of more than £1,100 from the Italian Government, and this enabled her to undercut British ships at every British port she touched.

The sugar growers of Mauritius are given a preference of some 24 per cent in the United Kingdom market. But their sugar is being increasingly brought here by subsidised Italian ships.

Or look at the Indian trade, the historic preserve of the P. and O. The Italians have put on the Genoa-Bombay route a new ship for which the Government found most of the money and for which it pays the Suez Canal dues.

This vessel is being largely patronised by British officers and Civil Servants in India for their voyage home, though their passage money is provided for them by the Government—that is to say by the British taxpayer.

British money is thus being used by British officials to support a heavily subsidised Italian ship against the vessels of one of the oldest and most famous of British shipping companies.

I have no doubt that the new 50,000-tonners, running direct to New York, will attract to the Italian ports much of the American freight and passenger traffic that formerly came to Great Britain and France.

Will they pay? Will the motor-driven Neptune on the Trieste-South America route pay? Or her sister-ship Oceania?

Nobody seems to care whether they do or not. These are not ships in the ordinary sense. They are strokes of State policy. They are items in the Mussolini programme for putting Italy on the map.

All the leading countries in the world have taken a hand in the mad game—all except Great Britain. For the past seven years, since the death of the Trade Facilities Act, no Governmental aid of any kind has been extended to British shipbuilding.

British owners, apparently, would not have it otherwise. They hate the whole policy of subsidies, bounties, and discriminations. Free access to an open freight market is their ideal.

But that ideal is vanishing beneath their very noses. Not only Italy, but America, Germany, France, and Japan have plunged into the subsidy business. In every direction British shipping finds itself squeezed and undercut. It is fighting a losing battle out of its own resources against the illimitable funds and facilities placed by State after State at the service of its competitors.

What is to be the end of it. British owners hoped at the World Economic Conference to persuade the other Governments to give up subsidies altogether; to leave shipping and shipbuilders alone, and to restore absolute equality of treatment to all ships under all flags in all ports.

That hope they must now abandon. The foreigners are not going to give up subsidies. They are going to "increase" them. Along present lines there is nothing ahead of British shipping but a continuous and cumulative process of attrition and decline.

In two respects they may themselves be contributing to this process. A British vessel in 1892 made the trip from England to Capetown in fourteen days. To-day, forty-one years later, the same voyage takes seventeen days. That looks to me like "sinking for it."

Again, the policy of selling old but still seaworthy ships to competitors abroad, who will operate them on lower wages, cheaper food, and smaller crews, seems (Continued on Page 10.)

The Very Idea!

MORE PROPAGANDA

The Russian best-seller of the moment, we read, is a two-volume "Ideological" novel called "Energy," by Feodor Vasilievich Gladkov, which deals with the building of the hydro-electric Dnieprostroi dam.

It appears to be a heavy bore, like—for that matter—those celebrated Russian novels of the old regime about little dull suburban towns full of dust, dogs, retired generals with dyed whiskers, sly officials, lilac-trees, faded spinsters, muzzy chatter, smalls, samovars, and suicide. In such towns, whenever there is a tea-party in Society, everybody turns despairingly aside at intervals and mutters: "My God! What people!" The mumbling is interminable and the philosophy like a sick headache.

The new school of Russian fiction seems brisker, but equally as boring.

Envelop all this in endless gabble, and in an apothecary of Lenin, with fireworks and halos, and you have the goods.

Incidentally the formula for the current Soviet novel, or play, is so simple that anybody can do it. Nutshell example:

SCENE: The new power-station at Sorotchinsk. Alexey Alexievich, a virtuous Young Communist, working furiously and exhorting his comrades. One of these, Catherine, embraces him suddenly.

ALEXEY: Why, comrade?

CATHERINE (simply): I love you.

ALEXEY: Constructive Marxism has no room for that! (Hits her with a piston rod. She falls. Enter an agent of the O.P.P.)

AGENT: Comrades, there is sabotage! A leg has been found in the machinery! (To Alexey) Yours?

ALEXEY (very pale): Yes, comrade!

Enter a Commissar, hastily. COMMISSAR: Comrades, the peasants have struck! There will be no harvest! We are ruined!

ALEXEY (in a clarion voice): No, comrades! (Hops out, gathers in harvest, harangues peasants, raises volunteer force of city tram-inspectors and laundry-men to shame peasants, installs them on land, makes 308 speeches on Marxism and the Five Year Plan, and hops back to Sorotchinsk, where Catherine at once embraces him again.)

CATHERINE: I have told them! Your leg—it was a pure accident! I love you!

ALEXEY (stunning her with a spanner): The warriors of the Proletariat have no time for that!

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER

THE recent sensation caused by Lord Raglan, who stated that many of the most revered and ancient family trees are bogus, has relieved several people in Hongkong. A certain talpan who is now nearly a millionaire says that Lord Raglan has definitely proved the falseness of his own family tree, which traces his ancestry back to a grocer's assistant in Whitechapel in Stiff Neck, Arizona.

MUG'S DISEASE

The eminent pathologist Professor Gooft has segregated yet another germ. It is, responsible, he says, for the virulent Benedictitis or Purl-and-Plain Disease, and generally for the group of afflictions which are classed under the heading Mug's Disease.

The onset invariably coincides with the finishing of a row of knitting by the victim's wife. There is no warning, as a rule. Simply a staccato "Count that!" The disease has been known to last 204 stitches (in the case of X.O.S. jumpers). Should the patient be absorbed in the intertext cricket news at the moment he is attacked, extreme irritability is likely to be present. Eye-strain is a concomitant, and there is often a temporary loss of memory.

The utility of relating should be stressed. This disease must be allowed to run the course.

Closely allied to it is the dreaded Stein-Holder's Disease. Chief symptoms are a dull, glassy look, indicative of morbidity, and the peculiar position of the hands, which are held out rigidly about three feet apart during the attack. The patient often complains of a pain in the neck.

Should complications arise, it is advisable to consult a skin specialist.

These diseases assume epidemic proportions during the winter months. Professor Gooft expects no abatement in the winter.

"I like to curl up with a good book."

KING OF AFGHANISTAN ASSASSINATED

DRAMATIC LONDON ANNOUNCEMENT

TRAGIC AFFAIR APPARENTLY BEING KEPT SECRET FROM PEOPLE

YOUNG SON PROCLAIMED NEW KING

LONDON, NOV. 8.

NADIR SHAH, THE KING OF AFGHANISTAN, WAS ASSASSINATED IN KABUL THIS MORNING.

A sensational dramatic communique was issued to this effect by the Afghan Minister in London this evening, the news coming as a bombshell to the newspapers and diplomatic circles alike.

Not a word has come through from the many newspaper correspondents in Kabul and it is supposed that the news of the murder is temporarily being withheld from the public.

The information at the Afghan Legation is extremely scanty.

The cable received by the Minister merely states that Nadir Khan was murdered this morning and his son proclaimed King to-night.

A BRILLIANT MILITARY MAN

The manner of the assassination is not disclosed. The telegram mentions little more than that the King was murdered by "a traitor."

The country is quiet.

KING FOR FOUR YEARS.

Although Nadir Khan, had to win for himself the throne of Afghanistan in 1929, he was a member of the Royal house.

Under King Amanullah he was Minister for War and commander-in-chief during the campaign which was started against India in 1919 and he conducted the negotiations with the Government of India regarding the granting of an amnesty to the Afghans domiciled in India who had taken part in the fight.

His success on that occasion brought him great prestige among all the tribes and he enjoyed the confidence of the mullahs.

In 1924 as the result of a difference of opinion between him and Amanullah regarding the handling of a local rising, Nadir resigned his office and went as Minister to Paris, but in 1929 gave up the post owing to ill-health and settled at Nice.

MUCH ABILITY.

A man of much ability, he was always in favour of introducing modern European ways into Afghanistan, but he was opposed to the haste with which Amanullah, after his European tour in 1928, attempted to force his reforms on the country.

When in the winter of 1928-9 a revolt broke out on account of these drastic changes and Bacha-i-Sakao defeated Amanullah, the latter called to his aid Nadir, who arrived too late, however, to prevent the fall of the King.

Nadir put himself at the head of the loyal troops and on behalf of Amanullah fought against the usurper, who called himself Habibullah. But, when Amanullah renounced the throne and went to India, from which he later proceeded to Italy, Nadir was himself proclaimed king.

DEFEAT OF HABIBULLA.

A long campaign followed and in October 1929, Nadir's brother Shah Wali entered Kabul.

Habibullah fled, but was captured and executed by the decision of a council of chiefs.

Nadir was unanimously elected King by the National Assembly. In a proclamation he pronounced for equal rights for all, prohibition, an elected Parliament and constitutional government, the development of trade, agriculture and education and the building of railways and irrigation canals.

The Westernising movement initiated by Amanullah soon revived and Kabul residents discarded beards and Eastern clothing for European dress. But Nadir made no attempt to force the pace in the matter of reforms. He was recognised by Britain in November 1929 and Amanullah offered to serve as his Minister in Rome.

FRIENDLY TO BRITAIN.

Afghanistan has been quiet ever since, although the independent spirit of the Afghans prevented Nadir Khan from displaying his friendly feelings towards Great Britain too openly on all occasions, there was no doubt concerning the immense improvement in Anglo-Afghan relations in the last two or three years.

Nadir Khan was a man who knew his own mind and had progressive ideas, but was shrewd enough to realise the importance of carrying his people with him.

The assassination will cause concern in Delhi.—Reuter and Special.

PILFERING FROM OLD BANK SITE

Painter Fined $50 Or One Month

"There is quite a lot of pilfering going on. I think the majority of the workmen help themselves to what they can get," said Detective-Sergeant Fowle in the Central Police Court this morning when Leung So, coolie, was charged before Mr. Balfour with theft of a quantity of electric cable from the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank site.

It was stated that 75 lbs. were stolen. Defendant was arrested trying to dispose of it to a marine hawk in Wing On Street yesterday.

Mr. Holmes, of Messrs. Logan & Amps, who are constructing the new building, said that defendant was a painter.

A fine of $50 or one month's prison was imposed.

CANTON POLITICAL CHANGE

Gen. Heung Hon-ping Resigns

Canton, Nov. 8. An event of much political importance is the Government's announcement of General Chan Chai-tong's acceptance of the resignation of the Second Kwangtung Army commander, General Heung Hon-ping, from all his posts.

General Heung Hon-ping's troops control the central districts of Kwangtung, including Canton City. His troops will be controlled by Chan Chai-tong directly.

General Chan Chai-tong will proceed to the Second Army Headquarters to-morrow morning to take over the organisation.

LORD LUGARD AND UNIVERSITY

EFFORT TO GET MORE FUNDS

CHINA DEBATE IN LORDS

London, Nov. 8. Lord Lugard, former Governor of Hongkong, whose keen interest in the University is well-known, suggested a further contribution to its funds from the Boxer indemnity during the debate on China in the House of Lords to-night.

Lord Lugard, former Governor of Hongkong urged every effort to cement strong friendly relations, and Lord Addington stressed the growing feeling that the British Legation should be moved from Peking either to Nanking or to Shanghai.

He also expressed regret at the reduction of British forces in Shanghai.

Earl Stanhope informed Lord Lugard that this was impossible. Lord Melchett supported Lord Peel and referred to the recent journey of the head of the Imperial Chemicals, Sir Harry MacGowan, to China.

He said he wished that the example would be followed by other leading industrialists.

Earl Stanhope, replying for the Government, mentioned that Dr. Sun Yat-sen once invited him to participate in one of China's revolutions.

As regards Chinese trade, he welcomed the recent visit of Sir Henry MacGowan to China. The Government's policy, he said, was one of sincere friendliness to China. Our aim was to maintain cordial relations with the constituted government.

NATIONAL SENTIMENT.

Lord Stanhope said that Britain had tried to meet China's national aspiration in the fullest measure and had recognised the strong national sentiment throughout the country.

As regards Lord Peel's suggestion of a gendarmerie, therefore, the Government thought that the first move should come from China.

If such a suggestion was made, the Government would do their best to see what assistance could be given.

LEGATION ISSUE.

The question of the removal of the Legation had been periodically considered, but the governments had not, up to the present, considered the change to be necessary or desirable.

It was doubtful whether any real increase in efficiency would result.

The question was also complicated by important considerations of health and expense.

SHANGHAI PROBLEMS.

The Government spokesman also pointed out that the Chinese Government had once or twice transferred their capital and the permanent removal of the British Legation to Nanking would entail some risk of being made in vain.

He emphasised that Peking was greatly superior to Nanking or Shanghai from a health point of view.

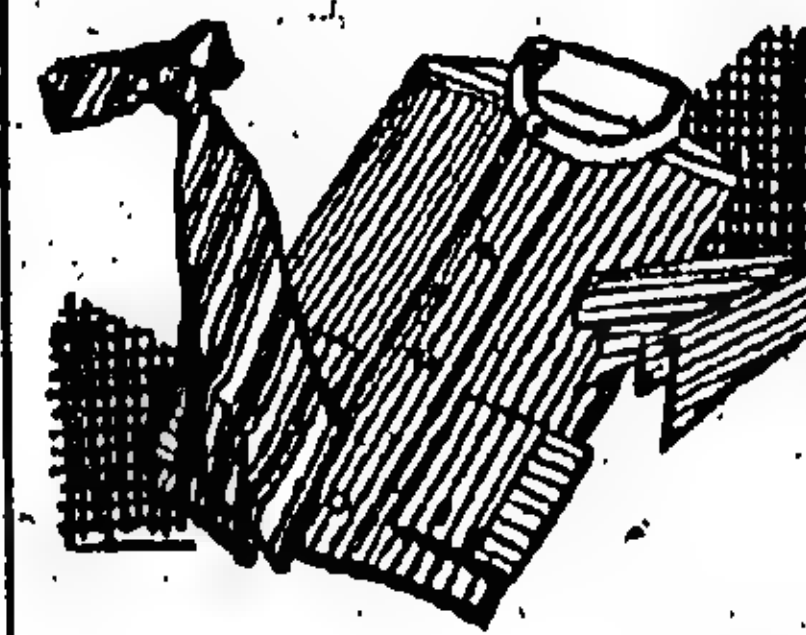

The alternative of Shanghai was also objectionable because it had its own special problems, which might absorb the Minister's energy.

H.K. UNIVERSITY ISSUE.

He also showed that the Government had no power to devote any further money from the Boxer Fund to the Hongkong University, as Lord Lugard had proposed.

Continuing, he asserted that the British Government had done more than any other power to demonstrate their friendliness and their sympathy with the reasonable aspirations of the Chinese people. The problem of further progress was one only the Chinese could solve. It was difficult to see what Britain could do which would not involve interference in Chinese affairs.—Reuter.

HOW I SAW IT FROM THE PRESS BOX

OWEN HUGHES THE HERO—CRICKET IDEAL PUT INTO PRACTISE—FINCHER'S FINE CATCH

(By "Veritas").

THERE were only two topics of conversation in and around the Cricket Club ground yesterday afternoon.

ONE was the dashed perversity of the Hongkong elements which had caused a really excellent wicket to be utterly ruined.

THE other, Owen-Hughes's defiance of the conditions, and his wonderful triumph over them.

NOW although I felt that Malaya made rather a bogey out of the wicket (for it rolled out to be easier after the local's innings than in any other stage of the match), there is no denying that Owen-Hughes had to garner his runs on an atrocious pitch.

HIS innings was worth going a long way to see. It was chanceless; he nursed the bowling with consummate skill, and when the time came for it, he hit the ball hard and true with the middle of the bat.

THE full blow of Pearce's over-night dismissal was felt yesterday morning. If he had been there to stay with Owen-Hughes, the whole position of the game might have been changed.

TO Frank Goodwin one can only say "Hard Luck." The K.C.C. speed bowler looks like being out of cricket for a couple of months. A torn ligament (recurrence of an old trouble) was the verdict of Dr. Selby yesterday, with a rider "No more bowling for six weeks."

NEVERTHELESS I understand that Goodwin will probably bat to-day, though if he does so, it will be under real disadvantages.

ALVIS, the young Malayan all-rounder was wondering yesterday what he had done to invite the malign machinations of fate. In the morning he had the mortification of seeing the Hongkong umpire give a negative gesture to a confident appeal after Dunkley had enlivened his delivery into the wicket-keeper's hands. The sound of leather on wood could be heard all round the ground.

AND then in the afternoon, Alvis was sent back to the pavilion under peculiar circumstances. He played forward to a ball from Duckitt and turned round to find his wicket shattered. An appeal to the leg umpire met with a "howled" verdict, yet from the pavilion it seemed that Dunkley had broken the wicket.

A PART from Hamilton, who emulated Owen-Hughes's example, thereby proving that the romantic ideal of the captain being the saviour of his side is not pure romance, and can be a definitely practical ideal, only Gill shaped like a batsman during the afternoon.

I wouldn't call Gill's innings a model of restraint, because very often, and especially towards the end, when an entire different policy was called for, he refused to hit even the obviously poor balls, and merely developed ultra-cautiousness.

BUT the value of Gill's innings was no less than that of his skipper. The Sikh seldom hit hard in front of the wicket, but his deflecting leg shots and wristy cuts were those delightful to the

Malaya Stage A Second Innings Recovery

CRICKET INTERPORT REACHES A FASCINATING CLIMAX

(By R. ABBIT).

ALTHOUGH I have been lucky enough to see a great deal of the Malaya match, I was quite unable to see the cricket yesterday morning and I find I missed a most exciting hour and twenty minutes.

FOR some time it was "roses, roses, all the way" for the visiting Team. Redmond was out at once. Hamilton started nicely but just as he seemed to be getting down to work he was bowled by one that swung up from leg. Goodwin and Minu failed to come off, and nine wickets were down when we were still thirteen runs short of the opposing total.

Then Dunkley joined Owen Hughes who was playing a true captain's innings. True, the former was lucky in one or two snicks, but he hung on and collected a few while Owen Hughes played an excellent innings and the score was lifted to a hundred and twenty-five before Dunkley was taken at the wicket.

True, he was caught in the same place two balls before, but the bowler, Alvis, had completely unsighted the umpire. Only four more extras accrued fortunately. Hongkong thus held a lead of thirty-three runs, which on the wicket as it played yesterday, was uncommonly useful.

AFTER LUNCH.

At lunch time it became known that Goodwin's strain was so bad that he could not take the field and E. F. Fincher, by permission of the Malaya captain turned out as substitute.

Archie Hamilton bowled at the Yard End and Minu at the other. The Malayan order was unchanged and the beginning of the innings was more or less a repetition of the first knock. As then the effect of the roller wore off very quickly and Hamilton as Goodwin before, began to kick in his third over.

And then wickets began to fall. Burn is, I fancy, rather an unlucky batsman. A quick one from Hamilton hit him in his tummy and dropped on to the sticks (12-1-7) and he was out though until then he had seemed quite comfortable.

Of course, it squared off with Garthwaite in the previous innings, but that did not help Burn much! Then next over Eu Chow Tiek hit one straight to Garthwaite at mid-off and rushed down the pitch. Gibson naturally sent him back—there was no run—and the felder throw down the wicket (13-2-0).

It cannot be said that R. N. Hamilton started with supreme confidence but both batsmen seemed to be settling down when, at thirty-six.

Pearce bowling round the wicket at the Yard end turned one back to get Gibson leg before. Again fortune favoured Hongkong.

Croome seemed to be settling down and Hamilton had more or less dug himself in when the former lashed out at Garthwaite and was brilliantly caught by Minu low down at mid-off from a red-hot drive.

Hamilton (Archie) resumed but it soon became apparent he was not bowling full pace—a groin injury developed. Nevertheless, he got his namesake R. N. to cut one very hard to Fincher at third slip. It was just a chance wide to the left hand but few but a Chapman or Jardine would have held.

Thenceforth A.C. lost his pace and soon after went off for good. It was hard luck on Hongkong to lose both medium fast bowlers, and later the lack became apparent.

Duckitt went on at the Law Courts end and soon got a quick one past Alvis. Deans, umpiring at the bowler's end was unsighted but he referred it to the square-leg umpire, who gave the batsman out, bowled, 61-5-6.

By this time R.N. was playing very nice cricket and twenty runs were added before a good one from Duckitt pushed back the new comer's off-pug. 81-6-5.

A RECOVERY.

But there came a turning point. Gill played good defensive cricket, enlivened by a couple of pretty fours on the off, and his Captain began to score quicker and finally completed his fifty with one of his best hooks to the mid-wicket boundary.

Minu was the bowler, and just after his revenge as R.N. played forward to a nice length log-break and was clean bowled 112-7-51. It was by far the best innings of the match.

A few minutes later tea was taken and it was after this that Hongkong seemed to lose their grip of the game. It was not that they became ragged at all, but the wicket which had been a brute, full of kickers and croppers, seemed to ease our lot and the remaining batsman played good watchful cricket.

It is true that at a hundred and twenty-five Willis lay back and tried to cut a straight ball from Redmond which bowled him neck and crop.

But already the want of a quick bowler was visible.

A GOOD STAND.

Without ever getting right on top of the bowling Gill and Morgan seemed quite comfortable and in just over forty minutes they added thirty-two runs for the ninth wicket.

R. ABBIT'S QUERY.

R. Abbit to-day raises the query whether, in view of the fact that Goodwin did not yesterday take the field, he is eligible to bat for Hongkong to-day.

According to Wisden's "Laws of Cricket" he is. The rule states "A side which has fielded with ten men or less, may bat with its full strength providing no disqualification rule applies."

They watched the ball excellently and never looked like getting out until Morgan swung at one from Owen Hughes and Teddy Fincher at second slip took thought and added at least a cubit to his stature to bring off a spectacular one-handed catch, from a hit which apparently had cleared him by foot. (157-9-15). A most useful innings and chanceless.

But Malaya were not yet finished as Speldewinde and Gill, running very sharply between the wickets added fourteen runs in about a quarter of an hour, before Pearce beat the new-comer with a good break-back.

AN AWKWARD FEW MINUTES.

In a way, it was lucky for Hongkong that the wicket did not fall a bit earlier. As it was Fincher and Duckitt survived four very nasty overs. Willis was coming off the pitch very fast and in his second over had Duckitt completely at sea.

The batsman survived a very confident appeal here for l.b.w. the umpire ruling that the ball was pitching just clear of the leg-stick. With the sying from leg it would, almost certainly have taken the sticks but it just did not pitch on them.

As the game stands, Hongkong, with all their wickets in hand have made five runs. They required a hundred and thirty-nine to win, so have to make a hundred and thirty-four more. Will they do it?

It sounds not too difficult, but the wicket is not to be trusted. It may roll out fairly well, or it may be very difficult. It certainly seemed easier at the end of the Malayan innings but it must be remembered that the home bowlers were a bit tired, and that both their faster spin bowlers were out of action.

I imagine that the first hour will decide matters. One point occurs to me and I confess I am not clear on it and at the time of writing I cannot lay my hand to a Wisden.

Goodwin was not on the field during the whole of the Malaya second innings. Is he entitled to bat? I have an idea he cannot do so, but I say so subject to correction. Anyway, he may not be needed.

THE DAY'S PLAY.

On yesterday's play the batting honours go to Owen Hughes of Hongkong, and R.N. Hamilton and Gill of Malaya.

All were in when their sides were up against it. All watched the ball on a very bad wicket and made most valuable scores. On the whole R.N.'s fifty was the best perhaps, as he played most of it with a very badly bruised finger which worried him the whole time.

Gill played the right game for his side and never really seemed in difficulties though he had not to face Archie Hamilton—bowling at his best pace.

THE HONGKONG SIDE.

Faced with the serious loss of his two faster bowlers I thought Owen Hughes managed his bowling excellently. On the whole the fielding was really good (if a little tired after tea) and the catches by Minu and Fincher were well above the average.

Redmond too brought off a most brilliant save when he raced across the screen and reached a tremendous on-drive of R.N. Hamilton's on the first bounce to save the boundary.

It was a gallant performance, enhanced by the fact that they did not lose a wicket during those last dreadful moments. Personally I regard the result as a most open one.

Shanghai Cricketers Arrive

NET PRACTICE AT H.K.C.C.

The Shanghai Interport cricket team arrived in the Colony this morning on board the Empress of Russia.

Early after disembarking, they visited the Hongkong Cricket Club and indulged in net practice. The whole team reported themselves fit and eager for the forthcoming matches with Hongkong and Malaya.

BATTING DOUBTFUL.

They showed promising form at the nets. Although expressing optimism regarding their prospects of winning the triangular tournament, they admitted that there was some doubt as to the strength of their batting.

Other than this they feel they will enjoy the balance of advantages.

BADMINTON AT K.C.C.

EXHIBITIONS LAST NIGHT

PRESIDENT TAKES PART

Badminton officially came into being at the Kowloon Cricket Club last night, when this new section of the club was opened with a series of exhibition matches.

A first rate court had been made in the main hall, and although the lighting presented some little difficulty to the players, the conditions were, in every other respect, admirable.

Mr. R. E. Lindsell, President of the Club, and a keen badminton exponent, took part in the demonstration games.

He was partnered by S. A. Gray against A. E. Collins and E. F. Fincher, the latter winning both games of 15 points up.

MIXED DOUBLES.

Subsequently Miss Woolley and Collins contested Miss M. Griffiths and Lindsell in a mixed doubles, the former pair winning after two fast and interesting games.

A singles was also indulged in by Gray and Fincher, featured by some hard hitting.

A large number of members turned up and watched the game with interest, and it is reasonable to suggest that badminton will shortly become a most popular pastime at the K.C.C.

RUGBY

CLUB "A" BEAT SUFFOLK

ROBERTSON IN GOOD FORM

(By "Line-out").

A strong Club "A" XV beat H.M.S. Suffolk in a rugby match at Happy Valley yesterday by two goals and a penalty goal (13 points) to a try (3 points).

The Club forwards started very lifelessly, but after setting down gave the backs plenty of opportunities.

Archer ran very well on several occasions, but Griffiths was marked too closely to enable him to give his wing men many chances.

PROFITABLE PARTNERSHIP.

In the first half the Suffolk were penalised in their own 25, and Robertson placed an easy goal. Later on Jenkins scored far out after good passing among the backs. Robertson converted with a fine kick.

In the second half Jenkins scored again and Robertson did the needful from the place kick.

The Suffolk finished very strongly, their forwards playing well in the closing stages. They scored their only points about half way through the second half.

HONGKONG BANK XV.

The Hongkong and Shanghai Bank have selected the following team for their Rugby match against the South Wales Borderers "A" at Soekopu on Monday at 5.15 p.m.—R. P. Edwards; A. D. Lowson, W. H. B. Rigby; B. C. Allan and F. J. Bond; M. W. Turner and L. E. Robertson; P. H. King, R. I. Stillard, H. A. Montague, D. A. Cumming, F. R. Burch and G. A. Stewart.

Capt. Gottwaltz, S.W.B., will referee the game.

BORDERERS' TEAM.

The following will represent The South Wales Borderers—L. E. Smith, Cpl Addison, Pte Simmons, Lieut. Galletly, Lieut. Martin, Pte Keogh, L. E. Hawitt, Pte Gilmore, Cpl Pratt, L. E. Hardy, Pte 25 Jones, L. E. Birch, Rovers—Pte 25 Fole, Pte Hoskins. Referee—Capt. Gottwaltz.

A bombshell has been dropped in local league football circles by the announcement this morning that the East Lancashire Regiment have withdrawn their teams from the second and third divisions of the Hongkong Football League.

The Regiment have been forced to this decision as a result of the "heavy expenses" and other difficulties.

The senior team will remain in the first division and start the season's programme on Saturday week, when they meet St. Joseph's.

FIXTURES WASHED OUT.

The Regiment is at present under canvas at Fanning, and the difficulties of getting three teams into Hongkong every week are obvious.

The second string should have played their first league match this week against the Royal Artillery, whilst the third team were due to meet the R.A.M.C.

In consequence of their withdrawal the fixtures of the second and third division teams have been washed out.

JACK HARE RETURNS

WITH NEW BOOK ON BOXING

FAMOUS NAVAL PERSONALITY

Jack Hare, glorified in the Services as the world's champion cook, and recognised by those in the position to judge as being an authority on the gentle art of fisticuffs, is back in Hongkong again.

This time he has brought with him a new and greatly improved edition of his fascinating brochure "The Knock-Out Blow and How To Avoid It."

Running into 177 pages, it not only covers the historical development of boxing, but, in a series of brightly written chapters, offers a host of valuable hints to the novice, and also provides new points for the boxer who has already proved himself.

INDISPENSABLE LITTLE BOOK.

The reading matter is freely interspersed with interesting pictures, of Jack, when himself a boxer of no mean repute, and of some of the world's champions during the last two or three decades.

Everyone interested in boxing should have this little book in his bookcase. It can be obtained from Messrs. Brewer and Co., for one dollar.

Jack Hare, who has cooked for 750,000 servicemen, is still with the troopship "Neuralia" and is this week returning to Shanghai with her. He wishes, however, to be remembered to all his local friends whom he has not had a chance to look up during his brief stay here.

ACHIEVEMENT

Some brilliant saves by Cross mainly assisted the Royal Corps of Signals from heavier defeat at the hands of the St. Andrew's Club to whom they lost by two goals to nil on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon in a friendly hockey match.

Ernie Fincher, who had been fielding as substitute for the Colony Interpost team against Malaya all the afternoon, was the marksman for the Saints on both occasions.

The Saints forward line displayed improved combination, Guest playing his usual steady game at centre-half. The Signals fielded a practically fresh forward line.

The Central British Association suffered their first hockey defeat this season on Tuesday afternoon when they lost to the Royal Engineers by two clear goals at King's Park in a friendly game. The losers fielded a depleted team being without the services of C. G. Francis and N. Whitley.

Y.M.C.A.'S BIG WIN.

The Y.M.C.A. first eleven gained a decisive victory over a Japs team on Tuesday when they won by five goals to one in a splendid friendly hockey encounter on the Marina ground. G. P. Lammet (2), G. H. Fowler, S. Fowler and R. Baldwin scored the goals for the winners.

RADIO WIN.

Playing on a poor pitch at Pokfulam and with a weakened team, the Radio Sports Club managed to defeat the University XI by the odd goal in three yesterday. Chanson and P. Singh scored for the winners in the first half and the University despite a persistent attack were unable to make up the arrears.

RECREIO BEATEN.

The Hongkong Hockey Club seniors easily accounted for the Club de Recreio when they met at King's Park yesterday, winning by four goals to nil. Lieut. Sinclair opened the scoring and G. E. R. Divett added two before half time and another after the interval.

"PADDY THE NEXT BEST THING"

Opening at King's Theatre To-morrow

BRILLIANT STUDY BY FOX FILM

The first of Fox Films 1934 general releases is to be shown in Hongkong to-morrow, which is but another indication of the splendid catering which is now being given to the local cinema-going public.

At the King's Theatre, Fox's brilliant study "Paddy The Next Best Thing", which features Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter, will open a run to-morrow.

The majority are certain to agree that the talking version of this delightfully romantic story easily surpasses its silent predecessor.

Baxter and Miss Gaynor make an ideal combination, and they, together with the supporting cast, give excellent characterisations.

SAVE OUR SHIPS!

one of very doubtful wisdom. A British ship that has come to the end of its usefulness under the Red Ensign is best broken up.

British shipping has waited too long for the world to become sane again. Attacked on every side by economic fanatics, it must organize for its own defence, and it must call in its friends—in this case the peoples and Governments of the Empire—who will follow a clear lead and support a united policy, but who also, if left to themselves, may do as South Africa has done. That is why an Imperial Conference, summoned to consider nothing but the shipping problem, is urgent and vital.

NEW YORK STOCK
EXCHANGEYESTERDAY'S MARKET FIRM

According to Messrs. Swan Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was firm yesterday. Business done was 1,800,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's market: After light trading throughout the day prices advanced as much as six points and there was most active trading with tickers very often lagging behind. There was no outstanding reason for this sudden change of trend but favourable factors included stronger commodities, sagging price of the U.S. dollar, highest silver price in three years and smaller cotton report than private estimators anticipated. The elections apparently had no effect on the market. Our New York Office Cable (Thursday, November 8th). Stocks: The market responded to renewed rumours of inflation through the medium of silver backed currency. The market looks higher. Wheat: The market trend was upward. Foreign and domestic news bullish and the market is expected to go further. Cotton: With the removal of uncertainty as to the cotton crop estimate buying of futures improved and there is a more diversified spot demand. Trading was light but the basis of the market is firm. Silver: The market closed strong on speculative buying owing to weakness in dollar exchange and persistent rumours in this market that the U.S. Government is contemplating purchasing one million ounces (sic) of spot silver. Understand that of spot silver. Understand that large stop loss selling orders have been placed within the last few days starting about two cents below yesterday's closing price. The Government Cotton Crop Estimate was reported at 13,100,000 bales slightly lower than expected. (October 29th estimate 12,885,000 bales.) Dow-Jones averages:—

TWEED BAY OPERATION

LANDING PARTY BY "ENEMY"

The necessity of maintaining in Hongkong an efficiently trained machine gun beach defence system was demonstrated last evening at Tweed Bay, when manoeuvres were carried out under the eyes of His Excellency the G.O.C., Major-General O. C. Borrett and members of the General Staff.

The night was an admirable one for testing the powers of observation of the participants. It was pitch black under a starlit sky with a small visibility even with night glasses.

It was noticeable however, that Naval officers present found little difficulty in picking up the target with night glasses, and this points to the necessity of training military personnel in the proper use of this means of detection.

Just before sundown two machine gun teams drawn from the South Wales Borderers and the Machine Gun Company of the H.K.V.D.C., took up position on the right of Tweed Beach with guns paralleled and heavily sand-bagged and trained on D'Agulhar Point with a range of 800 yards. Their right of arc was given as the point where D'Agulhar Point met the water and the left of arc the small headland to the left of the beach.

ALARM SOUNDED.

The Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of the gun teams, all trained men, then "retired for the night" within easy call should the alarm be given of the approach of the "enemy." The Nos. 4 on each gun, untrained men, acted as beach watchers. Their duty was, at the first indication of the arrival of enemy boats offshore to sound the alarm, send up an S.O.S. and telephone a warning to the troops.

About ten minutes after men had turned in the low whistle of

DR. RAJCHMANN VISITING CHIANG KAI SHEK

Shanghai, Nov. 9. Mr. Rajchmann, the League technical adviser, and a number of experts attached to the National Economic Council are proceeding to Nanchang in response to Marshal Chiang Kai-shek's invitation. They have been asked to draw up plans for the rehabilitation of the districts recovered from the Reds in Kiangsi.—Central News.

The alarm sounded and the men rushed for their gun positions. In the meantime the Nos. 4 had released their S.O.S. flare and dashed to the telephone.

TARGET "MISSING"

The objective of the teams was a model cutter, 32 feet long and four feet high with silhouettes of men overlooking the side which was towed at about five knots at 800 yards. The darkness of the night made it impossible for the fire controller to distinguish the target even with glasses.

A rocket was called for. With a swish it went up to illuminate the water for yards around. Still the "enemy" were invisible and very lights were resorted to at regular intervals. Still there was no sign of the target.

Then came the order to change position to the rocks below Tweed Point which gave the target range at 400 yards. A similar procedure followed as that carried out on the beach. This time there was no difficulty in picking up the target and the fire controller, laying on just before the objective reached the centre of arc, gave the order "Open-Fire." The countryside reverberated with the rattle of the guns as they sent bursts of bullets with deadly effect onto the target. They followed its course until it passed behind the headland. The belts of ammunition were interspersed with tracer bullets whose phosphorescent glare gave the gunners an idea of the position of the "enemy."

The manoeuvres were brought to a close shortly after 8 p.m. and the party returned to the cliff-top again.

TAIT'S MANILA CARNIVAL

ALL THE FUN OF THE FAIR

Tait's Manila Carnival Show has arrived, and for the last two days scenes of great activity have been noticed at Kowloon.

The show will open on time to-night, the position being the same as last year; on the vacant ground by the side of the Peninsula Hotel, Kowloon.

The slogan of the organisation, which is "Fun for all and all for fun" seems to be a very apt one, as they have in their Carnival such a choice of selection of different forms of amusement that it seems impossible for anyone attending not to find something that just suits their taste, though most who do attend cannot resist having a go at everything.

Five different riding devices have been lined up. The "Dodgem" will probably be the most popular, though a new ride called the "Whip" looks as though one should get a lot of fun out of it. There is also a "Caterpillar," "Big Wheel" and "Merry-go-round."

The "Hawaiian" Cabaret show should prove to be a big drawing card. Captain Charles Bath's "Monkeyland" should also be well patronised, but then, performing monkeys always do draw big crowds.

"Chandu," a great illusion full of mystery, is presented by Professor Raymond.

Quite a new thing in the Circus line is the Filipino Circus. This is their first visit here. Performing feats, introduced by Tom Tong, a clever Chinese showman, with a heavy American accent; a "Motor-drome," in which some hair-raising motor-cycling is presented, and the big free act presented by reckless Eddie Phillimore in his "Globe of Death."

These are the chief shows in the Carnival, so given good weather the show should have a very successful season here.

LA GUARDIA TRIUMPHS

COMPLETE CONQUEST IN NEW YORK

TAMMANY TAKES DEFEAT WELL

New York, Nov. 8. The final figures of the Mayoral election in New York showed that over two million voters went to the poll despite the intimidation campaign.

La Guardia had a majority over 250,000 the figures being:
La Guardia 858,500
McKee 684,000
O'Brien 684,000
Mr. La Guardia followed up his triumph over Tammany Hall, the first disturbance of its rule of New York for many years, with a promise to give the people a civic administration free from graft, from sinecures and from want of funds.

ALL-ROUND VICTORY.

The Democrats also failed in another of their cherished objects, namely, control of the New York State Assembly, in which they lost ten seats of New York City's representation.

Mr. Bernard Deutch, the well-known Jewish leader, and a follower of Mr. La Guardia, was elected President of the City Board of Aldermen, while the remarkable revolt against Tammany also resulted in a majority for La Guardia's borough and judicial candidates.

All of them were elected with the exception of Mr. Pecora, the attorney who has charge of the Senate Banking Investigation, who was third in a three-cornered fight for the post of District Attorney for New York City.

GOOD LOSER.

Mr. O'Brien, the retiring Mayor, proved a good loser. He emphasised that it had been a clean fight and that Tammany Hall had taken its first defeat good-naturedly despite the fact that it stands to lose thousands of municipal jobs.

"The Tammany Tiger, like all cats has many lives. Tammany will continue all the same," declared a prominent Tammany official today.—Reuter.

CLAIM AGAINST BANK

EVIDENCE GIVEN OF A "SECRET WORD"

A claim against a Chinese bank arising from a draft was continued before the Paine Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsay, at the Supreme Court to-day.

Wong Wing (Yin) Lee, alias Wong Fook, claimed from the Eu Yan Sang firm, as payers of a draft (Pun character) for $700.

Mr. M. A. da Silva represented plaintiff and Mr. M. K. Lo appeared for defendant. Mr. F. H. Losaby represented a third party who were guarantors of the draft.

Mr. Silva made an application to be permitted to bring evidence of a Chinese banking custom.

Objection was made by Mr. Lo, and Mr. Losaby, who submitted that the evidence was irrelevant and His Lordship said he would consider the application later.

Wong Sik Yung, alias Wong Kin Sau who was called by Mr. Lo, gave evidence that he worked for plaintiff in Siam and brought his children back to China for him when he returned. Witness took out a draft for $700 in Siam and agreed upon a secret word to be used to effect payment in Hongkong. Witness, who still retained charge of the draft, lost it in May, 1932, and informed the bank who advertised for its recovery. It was not forthcoming however, and as witness knew the secret word, payment was made to him a month later.

Mr. Lo: Plaintiff has said that the first time you met him in Hongkong, you confessed that you had stolen the money by means of the draft. Is that true?

Witness: No.
The case is proceeding.

to him. He agreed that it was part of the instructions for the safe custody of secret and confidential documents that carbons should be destroyed by fire. He could not say that these instructions were carried out by McDell, but he did see charred paper in the grate.

When the papers were handed to him witness put them in his box. He checked them over in the morning and found there were some mistakes in the typing.

A COPY POSSIBLE.

"In my opinion it would have been possible for copies to be taken while McDell was typing the papers," added witness.

Owing to the mistakes, the Army and Empire and Mathematics papers had to be typed again by the two sergeant-instructors. They were then checked by Capt. Cannon, sealed in an envelope and given to him to take to the printers that afternoon. When they were received back in the office the seals were intact. Witness took them off McDell's table. Acting on instructions from Capt. Cannon witness opened the papers and inspected them. He checked the papers over, checked some errors and locked them in his box. On Saturday morning he opened the box and took them to Capt. Cannon for his inspection. The errors were inked in by Capt. Cannon, the papers were sealed up and taken to the printers that evening by witness personally.

Some day the following week the papers came back from the printers.

PAPERS SEALED.

W/O. Senior said that the papers came back from the printers later in a sealed package, the seals of which were intact. After showing them to Capt. Cannon he locked them up, with the seals still intact. He broke the seals when the papers were sent to the out-stations. From August 25 until September 15 the papers were in the box.

When the duplicate key was produced, witness said he recognised it as the key which opened the box. He had seen the key, which he believed to be the same as opened the box on one of the tables in the schoolroom. When he wanted to go to the Library on September 23rd he could only find one key which did not fit the confidential part of the Library he wanted to open. He went back to the box and searched again for the key and then saw a key on the corner of the table near the box, recognising it as the one for which he was looking. He had no idea how the key got in that place as he was always very careful to lock up all confidential keys. There was no official duplicate key to the box as far as he knew. He had never had occasion to have one out personally.

DERHAM'S DUTIES.

Cross-examined by Mr. Stollert, witness said he sent Pte. Derham to Shanghai on Monday, August 28th to take Army forms and maps to Sgt. Tittle, instructor of the 1st Class candidates. On August 29th he sent him again to bring back the papers of the 1st Class candidates which he was to collect from Sgt. Tittle.

On Wednesday he was sent to bring back further papers. August 30th was the last day witness sent Pte. Derham to the Camp before the beginning of October. No duties took him to the Camp during that time. The only things in the black box were confidential papers and two keys. On the night of August 14th he was there until the papers were sent to the printers. On the night of August 18th the papers were unsent in the box. He agreed there was a box of old keys in the General Room. He had only tried one of them to see if they would fit. He could not say if any of the others would fit.

USE OF KEYS.

Answering Lieut. Hope, witness said McDell had always done his work satisfactorily and he had never had cause to suspect him. He was extremely surprised to hear he had been arrested, especially when he had been arrested on the present charges. It was, however, quite possible for him to triplicate the copies of the papers.

Lieut. Hope: Do you permit any one to use the keys of your box?—Witness: I permit my Sgt. Instructors to use them.

Have you ever allowed McDell to have the keys?—I think there were two occasions. One occasion I recollect was when I left my keys behind one day and sent McDell to the house to bring them back for me.

Do you know if he had your keys for a whole day at one time?—I cannot recollect that.

KEY EXPERT.

Li Chuan, keysmith, of 470, Lochart Road, said he was formerly employed in the Dockyard as a mental worker and for the past 15 years had been a keysmith. He was shown the key and stated that it had been made by mould and was certainly over a year old. He arrived at that conclusion by the colour and the dirt adhering to the filing marks on it. The key had not been used often.

to the Education Office to collect from a pigeon hole some wax sheets and found a small key at the side of the sheets. He had been to the same pigeon hole thirteen days previous but had not noticed the key on that occasion.

He tried the key in the lock of the black box and found it opened the box. He placed the key on the table and left it there. The following morning he remembered the key and reported the matter to W/O. Senior. Accompanied by Senior he went to look for the key but could not find it. Derham was cleaning the room and when asked if he had seen the key, produced it from a shelf.

The case is proceeding.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Today's Contract Problem

The following hand somewhat resembles a double dummy problem. North and South to make five diamonds with West opening the king of hearts and shifting to the deuce of diamonds.

♠ 10 4 ♠ J 8 7 6
♥ A K 3 ♥ Q 4
♦ 8 5 3 ♦ K Q J
♣ 6 5 ♣ 10 7
♠ A Q 5 ♠ Q 4
♥ 9 7 6 3 ♥ K Q J
♦ A 8 ♦ 10 7
♣ A 8 ♣ 10 7

Solution in next issue. 17

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Someone recently asked me what I thought the most powerful defensive weapon in contract bridge. My answer—the deductive double.

When your opponents open the bidding, you first must assume that they have a definite amount of strength. However, they may be opening on a psychic and your protection is the deductive double. Here are three examples of bidding in which a deductive double is employed.

First, suppose South were to bid a heart and West and North passed. North having refused to keep the bidding open, East knows that West, his partner, must have the missing strength. Therefore, he should not allow the hand to be played at one, but should double. This is called a deductive double.

Another example: South bids one heart, West passes, North bids one spade. East and South pass. West now knows that South must have bid a psychic, as he has refused to answer to the one over one force. Therefore, West should double.

An excellent example of the deductive double is given in today's hand. South, who was using a system of bidding whereby he opened first hand with two and one-half quick tricks and a bid-diamond suit, started the contracting with one heart. I am sure that many of my readers in the West position immediately would double, and of course South would be out of his bid predicament. West eventually would have to bid hearts and could not make his contract.

Therefore, West's proper bid is to pass. Now when North passes, East will make the deductive double. South will pass and West will turn East's double into a business double by passing.

South can take only five tricks, but West, with only his six quick tricks, also would be unable to make any contract.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"Being the 'young kid' on a motion picture set is one of the greatest advantages an actress can have in Hollywood."
This is the opinion of Loretta Young, one of the screen's most successful "youngsters," who started her career at the tender age of fifteen years with Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and who since has ascended to stardom in such pictures as "The Ruling Voice," "Playgirl," "The Hatchet Man" and "Life Begins at Midnight." She is now appearing in "Midnight Mary," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature commencing to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

"When I first appeared in pictures as a kid I discovered that instead of being handicapped I really benefited by my youth. Everybody extended a helping hand from prop boy to the biggest star," explains Miss Young.

Lon Chaney gave me my first makeup lesson. He taught me to apply gradient so it would not deaden my own skin colour. Workers in the wardrobe department put eight pairs of stockings on my legs and padded my waist with cloth so I could meet Herbert Brenon's requirements for a leading lady in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." When he became exasperated with my work I was saved again by being the 'kid'.

"During the last few silent pictures I was still a youngster on the set, but when a new kind of film was introduced I was able to improve my makeup again on friendly advice from cameramen. Large cranes and complicated moving shots became the vogue, and being the 'kid' I was tipped off on how to walk and time action to conform to the new technicalities."

"Rackety Rax"
Greta Nissen, feminine lead in "Rackety Rax," Fox comedy now playing at the King's Theatre, has most recently been seen in "Ambassador Bill," "Good Sport" and "The Silent Witness." Previously her best known pictures were "Transatlantic," "Women of All Nations" and "Hell's Angels."

Miss Nissen has a delightful comely role in "Rackety Rax," that of the platinum blonde sweetie of a sporting racketeer who muscles in on college football and makes millions before retribution overtakes him. Victor McLaglen plays the role of the sporting world racketeer.

The part of Volpe, the racketeer's girl, introduces Greta to the haunts of the Broadway crowd which narrows the race tracks and other sporting events. Volpe has some exceedingly narrow escapes from the wrath and fists of her "protector's" wife.

Others in the cast of the comedy are Nell O'Day, Arthur Jenkins, Vince Barnett, Marjorie Boede, Esther Howard.

"Summer Lightning" which is now showing at the Central Theatre is a team job in the lightest sense of the word.

Author of the story is that master of humorous writing, P. G. Wodehouse, famous on both sides of the Atlantic for the wit of his novels. It was fitting that Ralph Lynn should be chosen to bring the character of Hugo Carmody to the screen, since the kind of humour typified by the B. & D. star is absolutely Wodehouse in its essence. They both trade in absurdity; both characterize young men whose very faux pas amount, in spite of him and not because of him, to master strokes of genius.

"Summer Lightning" introduces Ralph Lynn as Hugo Carmody, secretary to Lord Ensworth. Being in love with Ensworth's ward, Millicent, Hugo conceives the brilliant idea of stealing the old man's prize pig, Ensworth, and posing as a hero by returning the animal without any serious trouble—but the complications which subsequently ensue from this apparently simple act of knavery are uproariously funny. Suffice it to say that by a series of masterly blunders Hugo successfully achieves his plan, outwits his rivals and marries the girl.

Supporting the cast are Winifred Shotter, Dorothy Boucher, Esmé Percy, Miles Maleson and Horace Hodges.

"Paddy, The Next Best Thing"
Warner Baxter is co-starred with Janet Gaynor in "Paddy, The Next Best Thing," the Fox picture that starts on Saturday at the King's Theatre. This is the first time in two years that the popular stars have been teamed, the last previous occasion being "Daddy Long Legs". Miss Gaynor, who has just completed "Adorable" with Henry Garat as her starring partner, has the title role in "Paddy," and Baxter will play the part of Lawrence Blake. Janet's role is said to be in striking contrast with anything she has played. Her dialogue will have a flavour of Irish dialect.

Harry Lachman, who has won critical favour by his first American production, "Face in the Sky," directed and Edwin Burke adapted the play for the screen.

The Eagle and The Hawk
Hollywood—Farmanaut, in particular—has been itself proud, having taken a story by the author of "Wings," injected the most thrilling air episodes, spiced it with crisp and effective dialogue, provided it with a windfall of mirth, added a tender and genuinely touching romance and given a complete and authentic picture of the lives of those devil-may-care sky-men who flirt with death in the clouds and are just as adventurous on the ground.

That's what has been done in "The Eagle and The Hawk," the widely heralded film which is opening on Sunday at the Queen's Theatre. The cast is a director's dream—Frederic March as "The Eagle," loving flying, abhorring killing; Gary Grant as "The Hawk," quick-tempered and quick-triggered observer; blonde and handsome Carol Lombard as the beautiful English society girl; Jack Oakie, the aviator who takes nothing seriously except his meals and his medals.

The story is that of "The Eagle," an expert flyer whose sensitive temperament revolts against the idea of the incessant murder in the air, and "The Hawk," a valiant air-fighter who reveals in his vicious, death-dealing fights. Bitter enemies, they fly and kill together until "The Eagle" breaks under the strain.

He goes on a furlough to London, and finds a temporary haven in the arms of a beautiful girl. He returns to discover that his buddy has been murdered by the enemy's ace, Voss. Infuriated, he tours the sky, finds the ace and destroys him. His discovery that his famed adversary is but a mere youth puts him in a semi-hysterical frame of mind.

Then follows the climax, utterly different from anything you've seen on the screen. "The Eagle and The Hawk" is unconditionally recommended.

TRIBUTE TO SOONG. SIR FREDERICK MAZE GIVES RECEPTION

Shanghai, Nov. 8.
A souvenir of admiration and regard was presented to Mr. T. V. Soong by Sir Frederick Maze, Inspector-General of the Chinese Maritime Customs, at a reception held this evening. The presentation was made on behalf of Sir

Frederick and the Customs staff. Mr. Soong, in acknowledging the tribute, said that he took pride in looking back over the achievements of the Customs service during his administration as Finance Minister. Revenue had been trebled since the attainment of China's tariff autonomy and the service, during the troublous times of past years, had maintained the high standard of integrity which it had always enjoyed. —Reuter.

LO WEN KAN'S RETURN

STATEMENT ON HSINKIANG

Tientsin, Nov. 9.
Dr. Lo Wen Kan arrived here late last night from Tangku where he had disembarked from a Soviet steamer earlier.
He has issued a long written statement on the results of his visit to Heilungkiang Province.
He says, in effect, that he was profoundly impressed by the size of Heilungkiang which represented an area larger than Liaoning, Kirin, Heilungkiang and Jehol combined and has immensely rich natural resources. Unfortunately, perpetual internecine war between the warlords had reduced it to ruins.
He emphasised that rehabilitation of Heilungkiang would never be possible until a stable government was established with the help of the Central Government. The crux of the whole problem was internal rather than diplomatic as some people would imagine; the problem was how to suppress the recalcitrant warlords.
When questioned regarding diplomatic problems, he denied that he had negotiated with Soviet Government leaders, though he said he was well received by the Soviet authorities during his sojourn in Russia. —Central News.

GERMANY'S DEMAND

LORDS' DEBATE

London, Nov. 8.
The House of Lords to-night debated disarmament, the line of argument following closely that in the House of Commons.

Lord Halsbury, replying to the debate, pointed out that Baron von Neurath's reply to a question as to what Germany meant by "sample" armaments, did not refer to samples, but proposed that Germany should commence to disarm immediately and attain equality of the "the kind of scale we are ultimately to receive as soon as a Convention is signed."

CRUX OF PROBLEM.

The crux of the problem, said Lord Halsbury, was to overcome Germany's resentment at her inferiority and at the same time to meet France's claim to reasonable security.

Until then, there would be no real progress.

Britain was now conferring actively with the Powers having the largest armaments, which would have to be regulated or destroyed under the Convention.

Britain did not rule out any kind of disarmament which would meet with general acceptance. —Reuter.

LANCASHIRE AND JAPAN

COMPETITION PROBLEM DISCUSSED

London, Nov. 8.
A private conference has been held between Mr. Walter Runciman and representatives of the Textile Industries who discussed the question of Japanese competition.

Major Proctor, a Lancashire member interviewed several ministers on the position of the cotton industry in connection with the same competition.

A meeting of Lancashire members with the cotton operatives has been fixed for November 15, when they will discuss the position. —Reuter.

DISARMAMENT BUREAU

MEETING TO BE HELD TO-MORROW

London, Nov. 8.
As neither the French nor the Italian Governments will be represented by Ministers at the Disarmament Bureau to-morrow, the British Government delegate will be Mr. Cadogan of the Foreign Office.

Sir John Simon and Captain Anthony Eden will remain in London for the next few days for the necessary consultation, but it is hoped that one of them will leave for Geneva some time next week. —British Wireless.
